Lattimore Not Cleared By FBI, Says Hickenlooper

Iowan Takes Issue With Tydings Over McCarthy's 'Top Red Spy' Charges

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Senator Hickenlooper (R., Iowa) declared last night that after seeing the FBI summary of the Owen Lattimore files, he "completely" disagrees with Senator Tydings' (D., Md.) statement that it puts Lattimore "completely . . . in the clear."

Such a conclusion, said Hickenlooper, "is unwarranted."

Hickenlooper, a member of the Tydings subcommittee investigating charges brought by Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.), was out of town when the other four members heard the FBI summary read to them the other day.

Yesterday, he went to the Justice Department for a prolonged visit, and had the same material read to him.

Issues Statement

Late in the day, he issued a statement saying:

"This summary is not the file itself and is wholly inadequate to take the place of actual examination of the file and the information contained in the file. This summary does not evaluate the evidence in the file or make recommendations or conclusions.

"I completely disagree with Senator Tydings' statement with reference to Dr. Lattimore that 'the FBI puts you completely, up to this moment at least, in the clear.' I think that such a conclusion is unwarranted.

"I want to make it clear that I am not making any final conclusions either way in the case of Dr. Lattimore. I am convinced, however, that, based upon all the information which I have at this time, a full examination of the actual investigative file of Dr. Lattimore together with all other available information is essential before either the subcommittee or any member is justified in making any final conclusions.

Cites McGrath Quotation

"I think it is to be further noted that in a news story by Bert Andrews in this morning's New York Herald Tribune he quoted Attorney General McGrath as saying, with respect to the meeting of the other four members of the subcommittee with himself and J. Edgar Hoover:

"'Whatever conversation was had at the meeting and whatever files were shown, we were very careful not to draw any conclusions or to influence the subcommittee members in their conclusions. Thus whatever conclusions they have reached are their own.'

"This is in accordance with my understanding at my meeting this morning with the Attorney General that the Department of Justice and the FBI were not expressing any conclusion or evaluation.

"I am convinced that the FBI

District Area Swept by 65 Brush Fires

A total of 65 grass, brush and woods fires in the District area yesterday burned over several hundred acres of ground. They menaced a half million dollars worth of equipment at Fort Belvoir, and kept hundreds of men busy extinguishing them.

The three largest blazes were:

Two hundred acres of ground in the Bayliss and Lorton combat ranges at Fort Belvoir which burned from 1:30 p. m. to 7 p. m., with four regular fire companies, the post fire platoon of 25 men, and 120 soldiers required to put it out. No buildings were damaged.

More than 100 acres along Pohick Creek, Fort Belvoir.

Seventy-five acres of fields and woods on Bradley blvd., Bethesda, immediately south of the Bethesda Country Club.

In the District, firemen answered a total of 18 alarms for grass and brush fires.

There were 19 similar alarms in Prince Georges County.

Montgomery County had a dozen other alarms besides the one on Bradley blvd.; Arlington County had six; Alexandria reported five; and Fairfax County had three other grass and brush fires besides those at Ft. Belvoir.

Forecast of sunny and warmer today—the temperature should reach 65 degrees in the afternoon—gave rise to an estimate of 225,000 visitors to the District for its festival of spring.

Prospects for Easter itself, however, were less cheerful—there may be rain.

Some Program Changes

The Cherry Blossom Festival, hurt by raw cold last week, will be repeated this weekend at the Watergate.

It's called "Spring Is a Wonderful Thing," which no one denied even yesterday, when the thermometer reached 53 at 4 p. m.

The Greater National Capital Committee of the Board of Trade announced a few changes in the program.

The Navy Hour will be broadcast from the Watergate from 1 to 1:30 p. m. today, with the Navy Band and Cherry Blossom Queen Joan Russell on hand.

Secretary of the Navy Francis P. Matthews will crown the queen, surrounded by her court of princesses, shortly after 2 p. m. Milt Slosser will play the organ for Festival "sing time" from 1:30 until 2.

Christendom Solemnizes Good Friday

By The Associated Press

Christians throughout the world commemorated Christ's agony on the cross yesterday with special prayers for their fellows in lands where "the voice of God is silenced."

Good Friday services were held in many thousands of churches, from the great Basilica of St. Peter's in Rome to tiny mission chapels in African jungle clearings.

In an angrily divided world, the devout sought hope and comfort in the sacrifice that millions believe was made for them on the hill of Calvary nearly 20 centuries ago.

Great crowds of Holy Year pilgrims thronged St. Peter's and other Roman churches.

On his island refuge of Formosa, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, a Methodist, led Chinese Christians in a Good Friday fast for relief of the Chinese millions now in the Communist orbit.

In New York, 7000 worshipers packed St. Patrick's Cathedral for

U. S. Recalls Ambassador To So. Korea

Acheson Orders Muccio to Report Here to Discuss Critical Inflation

Secretary of State Acheson has recalled Ambassador John J. Muccio from South Korea for consultation on the "critical" inflation in that American-supported country.

This was disclosed yesterday by the State Department in making public the text of Acheson's warning to the Korean regime that it must clean house financially to merit continued economic and military aid from the United States.

Unless "satisfactory and effective measures" are taken to deal with the situation, Acheson said it will be necessary to "re-examine, and perhaps to make adjustments in" the current assistance program.

Acheson's virtual ultimatum was contained in a note handed Monday to Korean Ambassador John Myun Chang, to be forwarded to President Syngman Rhee. A translation was read to the Korean Parliament in Seoul today.

Uses Strong Terms

Acheson used some of the strongest terms he has ever employed in dealings with a friendly government. He said the United States is equally concerned with a proposal by President Rhee to postpone Korean general elections from next month until sometime in November.

The secretary said that American aid has been based on the existence and growth of democratic institutions in Korea and that holding the elections as scheduled is "equally urgent" with acting to counter inflation.

American economic aid is currently being supplied to South Korea at the rate of 120 million dollars a year. A 100-million-dollar authorization for the next fiscal year was approved last month in the House after an earlier aid bill was voted down by a one-vote margin.

To help the new South Korea republic withstand Communist pressure from Soviet-backed North Korea, the United States also is supplying arms and a 500-man training mission.

Scolds Prime Minister

In his note, Acheson scolded the Korean Prime Minister for having told the Chief of the United States Economic Cooperation Administration in Korea last month that there is actually "no serious problem of inflation in Korea but rather a threat of deflation." This, the Secretary declared, indicates a lack of comprehension and "unwillingness to take the drastic measures required."

Unless currency circulation is curtailed, the national budget balanced and rising prices halted, Acheson declared, the inflation would seriously impair Korea's ability to make effective use of ECA aid. He said bluntly that the Korean government has been spending without reference to its approved budget, has failed to collect taxes, has under-priced aid goods, and expanded government subsidies.

Interior Offers D. C. 6 Pools On a Nonsegregated Basis

By V. R. Montanari
Post Reporter

Secretary of the Interior Oscar Chapman reiterated his stand against segregation at the six District swimming pools yesterday in offering otherwise full control of the pools to the District Recreation Board.

The result apparently will be that the Recreation Board will withdrew from even part-time operation of the pools this summer.

This was indicated when Recreation Board Chairman Harry S. Wender said last night that a subcommittee which he heads will recommend that the board not participate in any way in operating the pools.

Last year, the Recreation Board ran swimming instruction programs and free swimming in the mornings, on a segregated basis at the pools.

Wender said his subcommittee will also ask the full board to urge legislation to turn over administration and operation of the swimming pools to the Recreation Board.

The Recreation Board chairman declared that "those who have advised the Secretary" to insist on the nonsegregation policy "have done race relations here a great deal of harm."

Secretary Chapman's offer, conditional on nonsegregation, was made in a conference yesterday between Rrecreation Board and Interior officials.

The nonsegregation condition apparently closed the door on compromise such as had previously been proposed by Wender.

The conference followed several developments in the swimming pool issue.

Chairman John L. McMillan (D., S. C.) of the House District Committee had introduced a bill which would turn over control of playgrounds and swimming pools from the Interior Department to the District Recreation Board.

Action on the bill was withheld pending further discussion by Interior and Recreation officials.

Meanwhile, Secretary Chapman announced all six pools would be nonsegregated this year.

At the conference yesterday, Wender, as a compromise, proposed operating three of the pools for white persons, two for Negroes, and the sixth, McKinley, for both. The board has consistently opposed biracial use of the pools.

Federal Worker Tax Credit For Expenses Ruled Illegal

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

A Federal court decision could cost Federal employes and military people a big fortune in back income taxes.

In short, it ruled that Government people, civilian or military, should not be allowed to make business expense deductions from their Federal income taxes.

Tens of thousands of Federal people would be assessed back taxes that would run into the millions if the ruling is enforced.

With the approval of the Internal Revenue Bureau, they have made deductions from their income taxes for out-of-pocket expenses connected with holding their jobs like private workers. The personal cost to Government people who must travel on Federal business is one example, and membership in professional societies is another.

The ruling places the Internal Revenue Bureau in a dilemma. Several Revenue offices already have sent out back tax assessments on the basis of the ruling. However, they jumped the gun on the bureau which is still studying the decision and it is a distinct possibility that the various revenue collectors will be instructed to ignore the ruling.

Several employes here who have been assessed will ask the bureau (1) to reconsider its action, and (2) for an official ruling since the court decision appears to conflict with basic law which allows public employes to deduct expenses connected with their jobs.

A spokesman yesterday said the bureau would make its decision

Ralph W. Myers, 44-year-old window-shade salesman was convicted early today of performing an abortion on Nina Jean Campbell last January, but a District Court jury ruled that the young mother did not die "in consequence of his act."

Myers faces a sentence of 20 months to five years.

The jury of 11 men and one woman deliberated for more than seven hours until 12:15 a. m. today, before reaching the verdict.

Judge F. Dickinson Letts was summoned from his home in the Kennedy-Warren, and Myers was brought up from the cell block to hear the jury's decision, 25 minutes after it had been reached.

Judge Letts did not set a date for sentencing.

Before the case was given to the jury, Judge Letts dismissed one of the two women jurors, on a motion by defense attorney James J. Laughlin. Laughlin filed an affidavit claiming that juror Lucy E. Nauman, 36, 4921

Underworld Vengeance Feared After Murder of Binaggio

Kansas City, April 7 (A.P.)—The underworld was ominously silent in Missouri tonight as the investigation into the slaying of Kansas City's northside political boss, Charles Binaggio, and his strong-arm man turned on gambling and racket dealings.

Police worked around the clock to try to get a line on Binaggio's out-of-town connections, particularly those in St. Louis and Denver, as there were hints that the underworld intended to avenge the double murder in its own way.

In St. Louis, the Star-Times, in a copyrighted story, said it had learned Binaggio had practically received his death sentence in a room in a prominent hotel there last January.

Binaggio, the newspaper said, had failed to appease the demands of underworld bosses, who had poured between $100,000 and $200,000 into the 1948 Missouri Democratic campaign on the assurance Binaggio would see that St. Louis became a "wide-open town."

Slain in Political Club

Binaggio's body and that of ex-convict Charles Gargotta, his right hand man known as the enforcer and executioner, were found in their Democratic political club rooms on Truman rd. early yesterday. Each had been shot in the head four times.

Police today combed the underworld here and questioned Binaggio's closest associates to try to

FBI Seizes One Of 'Most Wanted' In Florida Trailer

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover last night announced the arrest in Daytona Beach, Fla., of Lee Emory Downs, 43, one of the "10 most wanted criminals." His wife, Patricia Ruth Downs, 25, also was taken.

FBI agents made the arrest in a three-room de luxe trailer—equipped with television and a piano—in which Downs has been touring the country. Downs offered no resistance.

Downs is accused of robbing the Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Co. office at San Jose, Calif., in 1948 of more than $10,800.

Arlington Man Hunted Here in College Killing

Washington and Arlington police hunted last night for a 30-year-old Arlington student, charged with the murder earlier in the day of his roommate at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

He was identified as Len Broughton Smithey, son of Mrs. Naomi Smithey of Louisiana Hall, Arlington Farms. Chapel Hill police said the youth's home is listed as Arlington, but no other address than that of his mother is given.

The victim was George L. Bennett, jr., 22, of Route 2, Wadesboro, N. C., with whom Smithey roomed in the basement of the Chapel Hill home of V. A. Hill.

Hill said he heard three shots, or possibly four, when he was seated on a side porch. He said he called police, then saw Smithey walk—"deliberately and with no rush"—away from the place.

Last night Mrs. Smithey was prostrated by the news, because of a heart ailment. Her daughter, Mrs. Rowena Hamilton of Arlington, said her brother has not been mentally well since his discharge from the Air Force in 1946.

She said the family has known this, though three Veterans Administration physicians have pronounced him sane and "one of the most brilliant men they have interviewed."

Mrs. Hamilton said her brother attended high school in Chapel Hill, and graduated from the university last June. He took postgraduate work until last December, university authorities said, when he flunked out.

A police teletype lookout order here last night described him as 5 feet, 10 inches tall; weight 215 to 255 pounds; wearing glasses and an overcoat; armed and considered dangerous; mentally unbalanced; believed to be hitchhiking or traveling by train or bus.

Unguarded Air Force Officer, Sentenced to 15 Years, Escapes

Air Force authorities and the FBI are hunting a "model prisoner," a 34-year-old second lieutenant convicted of desertion and sentenced to 15 years at hard labor, who has been missing from Bolling Air Force Base since Thursday.

Lieut. Bloxham

A holder of the Good Conduct Medal, the prisoner, Lieut. Edwin D. Bloxham of Bellevue, Ohio disappeared Thursday from Walter Reed Hospital where he was sent without guard for a psychiatric examination.

Officials described Bloxham, a psychology student and former high school teacher, as a model prisoner who conducted rehabilitation classes in the guardhouse on his own initiative.

Bloxham deserted from Kelly Field, Tex., on August 7, 1944. In May, 1947, the Postoffice Department obtained a warrant against him, charging him with mail fraud under the alias of Edwin H. Arthur.

The FBI nabbed Bloxham last October in Cleveland, Ohio, where he was setting pins in a bowling alley.

A general court martial in January sentenced Bloxham to be dismissed from the service, to lose all pay and allowances and to serve 15 years at hard labor. The Air Force Judge Advocate General has not yet approved the sentence.

According to Air Force records, Bloxham majored in psychology at Heidelberg College, Ohio, being graduated in 1938. He did post graduate work in psychology at the University of Michigan and Bowling Green University in Ohio.

Set Taken From Shoe Of Guard at Lansburgh's

Watchman Believed Dragged by Foot; Knife Came From Tearoom Kitchen

By Charles E. Davis, Jr. and Alfred E. Lewis
Post Reporters

A set of fingerprints on a dead man's shoe gave police their best lead last night in the sadistic slaying of two night watchmen in the Lansburgh department store.

The watchmen, butchered with an 8-inch boning knife, were John C. Carpenter, 66, of 506 G st. sw., and Oliver R. Hess, 56, of 1324 Massachusetts ave. nw.

Hess was stabbed in a freight elevator. A blood-smeared trail showed he had been dragged from the elevator at the sixth floor. The fingerprints on his shoe indicated he had been dragged by his feet.

More Than 100 On Case

The department store murder case, with its fictional overtones, set off one of the greatest manhunts in the history of the Metropolitan Police Department.

More than 100 detectives, plainclothesmen, uniformed policemen, technicians and members of the coroner's staff were thrown into the investigation of a gory crime that may well go down in police annals as the Good Friday Murders.

Detectives from the robbery, safe and general assignment squads joined members of the homicide squad in the investigation. A temporary headquarters, in charge of Lieut. Richard Felber of the homicide squad, was set up in the store's executive offices on the fourth floor.

Throughout the day employes who might have some knowledge of who was involved in the crime were questioned at the store.

Former employes and those employes who failed to report for work yesterday were picked up and taken to police headquarters for questioning.

Still in Custody

"We have questioned about 120 persons so far," said Felber, "and we still have two or three of them in custody while we're running down their stories."

Actually, by midnight police were known to be holding only two persons on open charges. They are brothers, one 21 and the other 18. Brought into headquarters for questioning by Detective Sergt. Lloyd B. Furr of the homicide squad, the brothers, it was said, were formerly employed as porters at the Lansburgh store.

When the last of the Easter shoppers had vanished after the 6 p. m. closing hour last night, lights continued to burn on the fourth floor as detectives continued to question employes.

They were determined to crack

His companion, William Griffin, 22, 3601 Conn. ave. nw., was driving the car, according to police. He was taken to Leland Memorial Hospital, treated for cuts to the face and hands and for observation.

State Trooper Joseph P. Martinuk, said Carrick, pinned in the crash, had to be extricated from the car.

Army Reserve Plan Aims at 50 Divisions

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The Army yesterday announced plans to train sufficient reservists to round out its 25-division "M-Day" force and provide the nucleus of another 25 divisions.

Details of a new and realistic Organized Reserve Corps program, to replace a largely "paper" Reserve organization which has existed since the war, were disclosed by Army Secretary Gordon Gray.

The program, which officials said would put the Army Reserve largely on a par with the National Guard and Naval Reserves, calls for training drill pay for 255,000 officers and men next fiscal year.

This number would be increased to 367,000 by 1956, which will maintain the number of organized units needed immediately on mobilization at 100 percent officer and 50 percent enlisted strengths.

In addition, 330,000 individual officers and men, in a new Volunteer Reserve, would be authorized to take evening or weekend training without pay at 330 Reserve schools to be established. The latter, like those in the Organized Reserve, would be eligible for two weeks active duty annually with pay.

Assistant Army Secretary Karl R. Bendetsen told reporters the program would afford every reservist an opportunity to receive training —with possibly a few exceptions living in isolated communities.

He emphasized, however, that accomplishment of the program is dependent upon congressional appropriations, which will have to be increased 30 to 35 percent over the present 110 million dollars allowed for the Army Reserve, once the program is well under way. Additional sums will be needed during the buildup period for construction of armories and procurement of training equipment.

4500 Units Required

The trained reservists are required to man some 4500 nondivisional combat and service units needed on mobilization to round out what the Army calls its initial 25-division force. The divisions themselves consist of 10 in the Regular Army and 15 of the best-trained, equipped and recruited National Guard divisions.

Others scheduled for training with pay are a cadre of 4000 officers and men in each of 25 Reserve divisions (17 Infantry, three Armored and five Airborne), which would be filled and fully trained after mobilization.

Together with 12 other National Guard divisions, they'd give the Nation the framework of a 62-division Army.

An Army statement said 146,000 officers and 956,000 men would be needed to bring required units in the Reserve to full strength. This number was considered impracticable in peace-time.

"Desirable" Strength Estimated

A total of 146,000 officers and 478,400 men in the Organized Reserve—plus 330,000 in the Volunteer Reserve—was considered a "desirable" strength, the Army added. Even this total, however, was considered "an unnecessary drain on the national economy," it was said, so a "minimum" of 367,000 in organized units was set as the 1956 goal.

The 1951 budget, now pending in Congress, provides for drill pay for 255,000—73,500 officers and 181,500 men.

Under the Army plan, members of fully organized Reserve units will be eligible for 48 paid drills a year—if appropriations are sufficient.

To be "fully organized," a unit must have 80 percent of its officers and 40 percent of its men.

24 Paid Drills

Reservists assigned to the 25 skeletonized divisions and those in other units not fully organized will be allowed 24 paid drills—subject to funds being available. Other reservists, earmarked as "fillers" in Regular Army units on mobilization, will be authorized 10 paid drills.

Cost of the program was estimated at 150 million dollars in 1952, rising to 173 million dollars in 1955 and 180 million dollars in 1956 and then leveling off at 153 million dollars thereafter. In addition, armories and schools costing perhaps 80 million dollars would have to be provided.

Facilities for 275 of the 330 Volunteer Reserve schools now are available. They would be set up in cities primarily and be staffed by Reserve officers.

Officials said that on January 1 there were 224,000 officers and 272,000 men in the Organized Reserve. The new plan provides what the Army called a "sound promotion system" for those in both the Organized and Volunteer Reserve. Both groups are eligible to earn retirement credits.

Two other classes are established: the Inactive Reserve, which consists of members who are unable to take part in the required training or are temporarily disqualified; the Honorary Reserve, consisting of older or physically disqualified members with some minimum service requirements.

Bridges Seeks German Probe

Senator Bridges (R., N. H.) charged yesterday that British fear of competition is paralyzing west Germany's economy and "playing directly into the hands of the Communists."

Bridges urged an immediate Senate investigation of Allied policy in the occupied zones. He made the proposal in a letter to Chairman McCarran (D., Nev.) of the Senate-House "watchdog" committee set up to check on America's foreign aid spending.

McCarran told a reporter he will call the committee into session soon—possibly Monday or Tuesday—to consider Bridges' request.

"I am heartily in accord with the idea that the watchdog committee go into the study. This is a matter of grave concern," McCarran said.

Bridges said he was "disturbed" by secret testimony given the Senate Appropriations Committee by John J. McCloy, United States High Commissioner in Germany. He said McCarran's committee should "investigate its implications."

"The information I have," Bridges' letter said, "can lead only to the conclusion that Germany's economy is being paralyzed by British fear of competition, thus playing directly into the hands of the Communists.

"This economic paralysis is further aggravated by the efforts of the British to socialize the Ruhr coal and steel industries; by the limitation on synthetic oil and rubber industries which force the Germans to buy raw materials from British interests with the American taxpayers' dollars; by the new drive for 'decartelization' which has so confused responsibilities both in ownership and control of German industry, as to destroy incentive and confidence."

Acheson Planning to Start Dulles Working as Promptly as Possible

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Secretary Acheson hopes to put John Foster Dulles to work as quickly as possible at the State Department, and on tough problems of foreign policy.

The intention is to use the newly appointed consultant to the Secretary, the leading Republican authority in the foreign field, as much more than just a contact with the Republican Party.

If Dulles is willing—and this remains to be seen—he will be an active member of the Secretary's heavily burdened team of advisers.

Dulles said in New York on Thursday that the first thing he wanted to do was to familiarize himself with the problem of the Japanese peace treaty. To help bring him up to date, Assistant Secretary W. Walton Butterworth, former chief of the bureau of Far Eastern Affairs, went to New York to confer with him yesterday.

Later, perhaps after a two weeks' vacation, Dulles will sit down with Acheson to discuss the new job and to agree on the assignments for the next two or three months.

There are at least three fields in which the Secretary wants and needs Dulles' help, apart from the over-all job of helping to bring the State Department and the Republicans closer together in the making and the conduct of foreign policy.

One is the broad problem of Japan's future place in the world, her present role in Asia, and the shaping of her relationships with her Communist and non-Communist neighbors in Asia. Although there is not the slightest prospect at the moment of a peace treaty including Russia and China, officials see an urgent need of harmonizing the Japanese policies of the free nations that fought the war against Japan.

A second problem on which Acheson wants Dulles' help is the internal working of the State Department. Most of the changes urged by the Hoover Commission have been carried out; what is needed now is the judgment and advice of an informed outsider on how well those changes are working in practice.

A third problem requiring Dulles' counsel in coming weeks, is the stepped-up American propaganda campaign abroad, and the attempt which Acheson began in California last month to heighten American awareness of the cold war.

Work in Absence of Acheson

The hope is that Dulles will consent to work on these matters while Acheson and other advisers are in London for the meeting of the North Atlantic Council and for important meetings with the British and French Foreign Ministers. The State Department plans to send Ambassador Philip C. Jessup to Europe ahead of the Secretary to prepare for these meetings.

Further appointments of top policy advisers, probably including one or more Republicans, will await President Truman's return from Key West next week. The Dulles appointment was an important move, but only one move, in a continuing effort to lessen partisan bickering over foreign policy.

Nobody thought yesterday it would be easy to get bipartisan cooperation running smoothly again; the partisan warfare of recent months has left many scars on Republicans and Democrats alike. But officials had good hope that in time, and with continuing efforts, they would get renewed cooperation in foreign policy from all but the isolationist wing of the Republican Party.

Ellender Urges Cut in Annual Leave

Senator Allen J. Ellender (D., La.) announced yesterday that he would support a move to reduce the annual vacation leave of Government employes in an effort to save 100 million dollars a year.

In a speech prepared for broadcast (WWL, New Orleans), he said he plans to vote for a proposal sponsored by Senator Paul Douglas (D., Ill.). It would cut vacation leave from 26 days a year to 20 and sick leave from 15 to 12.

Ellender described the present allowance as "more than generous—it is wasteful." If Douglas' plan is adopted, he said, Government workers still will get more leave than 95 percent of the employes in private industry.

"Working for the Government is no royal road to riches," he said, "but on the other hand one doesn't read of many Federal employes dying from overwork. I think that 5½ weeks vacation is conducive to nothing so much as a desire not to work."

Ex-Vienna Resident Asks Czech Asylum

Prague Czechoslovakia, April 7 (AP).— George S. Wheeler, 44, an American who has taught economics in Prague since he was dismissed from a job with the United States Occupation Forces in Germany in 1947, announced today he has asked asylum here for himself and his family of five.

He said this action was a protest against "the brutal and unlawful treatment" accorded 58 Czechs who were unwilling passengers aboard three Czech airliners that a group of anti-Communists diverted to a United States air base in west Germany two weeks ago today.

Wheeler denounced aspects of American occupation policies, foreign affairs and racial relations at a news conference called by the Communist government's ministry of Information.

He implied, however, that he is not giving up United States citizenship.

Czech Radio Broadcasts News

The Czechoslovak radio broadcast the news conference story.

United States Embassy records show Wheeler was born in Tacoma, Wash., May 22, 1905, and has lived in Vienna, Va. He was employed as a senior industrial consultant with the United States Labor Department's wage-hour division from 1938 to 1942 and then transferred to the War Production Board. He worked for the United States Military Government's manpower division in Germany from July, 1945, urtil 1947. He now teaches at the higher school of economics in Prague.

Both he and his wife, Mrs. Eleanor Mitchell Wheeler, have written occasional pieces for a New York weekly news magazine, the National Guardian, which supported the presidential candidacy of Henry A. Wallace in 1948 and advocates cooperation between the United States and Russia for peace. Mrs. Wheeler is a native of Juneau, Alaska.

26 Remained in Germany

The airliner incident Wheeler referred to caused an exchange of notes between Czechoslovakia and the United States. Twenty-six of the 84 Czechs aboard—including eight crewmen who diverted the planes to Germany from domestic runs—chose to stay in Germany. All the others have returned to Czechoslovakia.

The Czech government formally demanded return of the eight crewmen on kidnaping charges and punishment of American officials who questioned the Czechs, charging they used "Nazi Gestapo methods." The United States embassy formally rejected both requests yesterday. It said officials in Germany had every right to question the group.

The Czech radio set forth that Wheeler "condemned the Marshall Plan, the Atlantic Pact and American espionage" and Mrs. Wheeler supported him in his statement.

Worked Here, 1938-42, Personnel Files Show

At the Labor Department here, personnel files show that George S. Wheeler was employed from 1938 to 1942 as a senior industrial economist in the Wage-Hour Division. In 1942 he was transferred to the War Production Board.

State Department officials said that no report had been received from the Embassy at Prague on the incident.

Residents of Vienna, Va., where Wheeler was reported to have lived before going to Germany with United States military government, did not remember him.

Yugoslavia Hits Russian 'Terrorism'

Belgrade, April 7 (U.P.).—Yugoslavia charged today that Russia is plotting "terroristic activities" against it and trying to incite the Yugoslav people to rebellion against Premier Marshal Tito's regime.

An angry broadside at Russia's foreign policy was delivered by information chief Vladimir Dedijer at a press conference on the recent Budapest meeting of Cominform military chiefs.

He lashed out especially at a statement made there by Soviet Marshal Klementi Voroshilov.

(Voroshliov, in a speech recalling the wording of the Cominform resolution which "excommunicated" the Yugoslav premier, expressed hope that "the Yugoslav nation would find a way of getting rid of the hateful Tito clique.)

"That statement was a warmongering one," Dedijer said. "It accuses Yugoslavia of intentions which the Soviet Union itself has against Yugoslavia."

"It is very peculiar that the Soviet Union speaks about peace in the world, and one of its representatives makes warmongering statements at the same time against a small neighbor, Yugoslavia.

Allen Postpones Trip To Rome About Trieste

Belgrade, April 7 (U.P.).—United States Ambassador George V. Allen, on the advice of the State Department, today postponed "indefinitely" a planned trip to Rome for discussions on the Trieste problem.

Allen said he found it "inconvenient" to go to Rome at the present time. However, it was reported that the publicity given Allen's proposed trip had convinced Washington that it was inadvisable for the ambassador to take any action now on the stalemated Trieste question.

U.N. Observer Wounded

Europe Held Seeking More Trade With Reds

Frankfurt, Germany, April 7 (AP).—European countries will try next month to get the United States to relax restrictions on trade with Russia and her satellites, authoritative sources said today.

These informants said the attempt is to be made at the May conference of French, British and American Foreign Ministers in London.

They outlined five problems expected to get attention:

1. A European attempt to build up East-West trade by liberalizing cold war restrictions imposed mainly by the United States.
2. A counter United States demand on west Europe to drop import and trade restrictions within west Europe and help wipe out west Germany's trade deficit.
3. A United States effort to press west Europe nations to incorporate Germany into European political and economic organizations and give the Bonn government more of a voice in foreign affairs.
4. Drawing up of a unified French, British and American stand on terms for German unity to counteract Soviet propaganda.
5. A reopening of a discussion on the ways of ending the state of war with Germany.

Van Zeeland Forms Cabinet In Belgium

Brussels, April 7 (U.P.).—Premier-designate Paul van Zeeland today said he has formed an all-Catholic (Social Christian) right-wing government and will go before the Belgian Parliament Tuesday for a vote on the return of King Leopold III.

Van Zeeland, one of Leopold's stanchest supporters, acted after receiving a message from the monarch. Some observers believe it contains a hint the King may abdicate in favor of his son if he is restored to the throne legally.

Van Zeeland decided to try to establish a single-party government after the Liberals rejected, 1199 to 1, participation in a Catholic-Liberal coalition and Leopold appealed for a swift end to the four-week-old political crisis.

North Ireland Premier Pays 'Delightful' Visit to Acheson

Sir Basil Brooke, premier of North Ireland, had a "delightful" visit yesterday with Secretary of State Dean Acheson, who is diplomatically blessed with ancestors from both North and South Ireland.

Brooke, who arrived in this country Thursday for a month-long visit, told reporters at the State Department he was pleased to learn Acheson "has Ulster blood in his veins."

British Ambassador Sir Oliver Franks, who accompanied Sir Basil on the visit, broke in with the reminder that Acheson had also stressed the existence of additional ancestors "from southern Ireland."

The premier is staying at the British Embassy. Just nine blocks away on the same street (Massachusetts ave.) is the residence of the newly arrived ambassador from (southern) Ireland, John J. Hearne.

Hearne is trying to get the United States to help end the partition of Ireland. He called on Acheson Thursday, and presumably learned about the secretary's southern Irish blood.

The rest of the Diplomatic Corps here is principally concerned with keeping the two Irishmen apart, and avoiding a diplomatic Donnybrook.

The State Department assigned security officers to accompany Sir Basil throughout his stay. So far, however, there has been no repetition here of the incident in New York Thursday, when 300 Irish-Americans gathered at the airport to boo the Premier on his arrival.

Hickenlooper Denies Lattimore Is Cleared

and the Department of Justice are giving zealous attention to this matter."

Hickenlooper's statement about his views of the file of the Johns Hopkins professor and Far East authority still left some ambiguities as to what charges he was taking into account.

Among other things, McCarthy had charged Lattimore with being a "top Soviet espionage agent" and a Communist. It was in reference to those two specifications that Tydings made his remark that the FBI summary put Lattimore completely in the clear.

He made that conclusion after declaring to Lattimore that "there was nothing in that file to show that you were a Communist or had ever been a Communist or that you were in any way connected with any espionage information or charges."

Tydings' statement was made at the conclusion of a public hearing Thursday where Lattimore appeared to answer McCarthy's accusations.

Tydings said his conclusion also represented the "universal opinion" of the other three subcommittee members who saw the FBI analysis.

[Tydings, informed of Hickenlooper's statement told the United Press by telephone from Hot Springs, Va., that he would stand on his original announcement. All members of the subcommittee except Hickenlooper, he reiterated, share the view that Lattimore was "cleared."

[Tydings said that after Hoover's summary was presented to the Senators, "we exchanged certain opinions." He did not say specifically whether "we" included Hoover and McGrath.

["The four members of the subcommittee who were present were in substantial agreement on what the file contained," he said.

["I notice that Senator Hickenlooper does not say that the file portrays Mr. Lattimore as a Soviet agent or a Communist." Editor's Note.]

Senator Lodge (Mass.), the other GOP member of the subcommittee who saw the summary originally, said at his home at Beverly, Mass., yesterday that he has nothing to say on Tydings' statement now.

"I think I will withhold any comment until I return to Washington," he asserted.

Lodge previously had said, however, that McCarthy has proved none of his accusations so far. He made that statement last week in calling for the creation of a nonpartisan commission to conduct a thorough inquiry into possible Red espionage.

McCarthy said Tydings' statement will have no effect on his plans to visit several East Coast cities this weekend in an effort to round up a group of witnesses who, he says, will prove his charges.

The subcommittee has agreed to hear the witnesses Thursday if they are willing to drop their cloak of anonymity.

The Senator, who claims to know what is in the FBI file on Lattimore, said Tydings "either hasn't seen the files or is lying." He questioned whether the FBI had let the subcommittee members see all of its information, including the results of telephone wire taps.

Tydings retorted that he is willing to stand on "my reputation for accuracy." He said it was significant that none of the subcommittee members challenged his statement. He said his statement was based on a complete summary of FBI information on Lattimore.

Meantime, in Madison, Wisc., the University of Wisconsin chapter of the Students for Democratic Action yesterday voted to circulate petitions asking for the recall of McCarthy.

Lloyd A. Barbee, Memphis, Tenn., president of the chapter, said the action was taken "because of McCarthy's attacks upon the State Department."

In Washington, Senate Parliamentarian Charles L. Watkins said there is no way a State can recall a United States Senator.

Watkins said only the Senate itself can expel a member. That, he added, would require two-thirds majority of Senators voting. And a quorum of at least 49 members would have to be present.

Barbee, a student in the law school, said its was his opinion that McCarthy "has done irreparable harm in weakening our foreign policy program by making unqualified attacks on certain officials."

Praise for Lattimore

In another development, the former chief of Army counterintelligence in the Far East said yesterday that Owen Lattimore rad given the United States protection from the Communists.

Brig. Gen. Elliot R. Thorpe, retired, wired attorneys for Lattimore, Far Eastern expert accused by Senator McCarthy of Communist activity and spying.

The law firm of Arnold, Fortas and Porter said the following telegram was sent from St. Paul, Minn., by Thorpe:

"As chief of Army counterintelligence in the Far East during and after the war, I can state Owen Lattimore gave valuable assistance of a confidential nature in our operations protecting United States policies from Communist detraction and sabotage."

Data for Probe Given McCarthy, Kohlberg Says

New York, April 7 (AP).—Alfred Kohlberg said tonight he has been turning over data and information to Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.) for use in the current State Department probe.

Kohlberg is a New York importer of Chinese textiles and a long-time foe of what he considers Communist activities.

Kohlberg told the Associated Press tonight that he fed information to McCarthy on Owen Lattimore and also on Ambassador at Large Philip Jessup, whose name has figured in the Senate inquiry.

Kohlberg said he was summoned by two FBI agents today and asked to tell all he knew about Jessup.

"I told them the data I had was largely in the hands of Senator McCarthy to whom I turned it over last week," Kohlberg said.

Billion Is Cost Of Chrysler's Strike to Date

Detroit, April 7 (AP).—Direct losses due to the Chrysler strike will pass the one-billion-dollar mark Monday, April 10, Automotive News asserted today.

The various Chrysler plants have been idle since January 25. The trade paper said that regardless of the outcome of current negotiations it would be impossible for them to reopen next Monday.

Automotive News estimates that through Saturday direct losses growing out of the shutdown will total $994,509,680. Another 20 million dollars it adds, will be lost Monday.

Itemizing the losses, the paper says:

"The $994,509,680 includes the following components: 700 million dollars representing average value of the 350,000 lost cars and trucks; 212 million dollars in lost purchases to Chrysler's 6500 suppliers; $61,509,680 in lost wages to the 89,000 Chrysler workers, and 21 million dollars in lost wages to the 50,000 idled supplier employes (after unemployment-compensation benefits.)

"The one-billion-dollar Chrysler loss is not an automotive strike record. That distinction is held by the General Motors strike of 1945-46, which lasted for 16 weeks and one day and cost directly-affected parties $1,457,400,000.

The crucial point is still the method of financing $100 a month pensions, including Federal social security, for Chrysler workers at age 65 after 25 years of service.

Ford Workers Quit In Year-Old Dispute

Edgewater, N. J., April 7 (AP).—An estimated 1750 workers walked out at the Ford Motor Co. plant here today in a year-old dispute over unemployment compensation benefits.

A union spokesman said the workers left their jobs in a "spontaneous protest" at the company's action in again appealing a ruling favoring the employes in the long dispute.

Lattimore Attack, 'Smear Politics,' Hit by Scientist

Owen Lattimore's spirited defense of himself and his counter attack on his accuser, if joined in by fellow Americans, will "reduce the gains coming from smear politics" a leading political scientist declared last night.

Dr. Harold D. Lasswell, veteran teacher at the University of Chicago and Yale Law School, said the Lattimore testimony has reassured many Americans that they can get their day in court before a Congressional committee."

Speaking to 200 persons at Walter Reed Hospital, attending a series of lectures sponsored by the Washington School of Psychiatry, Dr. Lasswell painted a steadily worsening picture of mass insecurity enveloping America as relations with Russia decline.

Low Ceiling Delays 1st Test of XP5Y-1

San Diego, Calif., April 7 (AP)—First test flight of the long-range, high-speed XP5Y-1, world's first turboprop flying boat, was postponed today until next week due to a low visibility ceiling.

Consolidated Vultee Aircraft Corp., which built the plane for the Navy, has described the craft as the fastest airplane of its type. A spokesman said top speed is more than 350 miles an hour and the plane takes off in a calm in 30 seconds or less.

Suicide Uses Cannon To Blow Off Top of Head

Pride's Crossing, Mass., April 7 (U.P.)—A Boston lawyer committed suicide by blowing off the top of his head with a miniature ship's cannon, police said today.

Chief Edward Aucone said Samuel Vaughan, 63, placed the muzzle of the brass cannon in his mouth yesterday at his estate here and pulled the lanyard on the model gun. The blast smashed his lower jaw and tore open his chest.

Lehman Cites Similarity of Charges by McCarthy to Those of Kohlberg

A remarkable similarity between Senator McCarthy's charges against Owen Lattimore and the attacks on him in the pro-Chiang Kai-shek writings of Arthur Kohlberg warrant investigation, Senator Herbert H. Lehman (D., N. Y.) declared yesterday.

In an interview, Lehman said he had examined an exhibit submitted for the record the previous day by Lattimore. In parallel columns, running for 11 typed pages, it sets off the McCarthy accusations against earlier statements by Kohlberg, wealthy New York textile importer.

Lattimore, testifying on Thursday before a special Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee, charged that Kohlberg was a leading light among a group of "fanatics" who constitute the pro-Nationalist China lobby, and that that group was McCarthy's "Edgar Bergen."

Lehman said he was "amazed and impressed" by the close parallel in the attacks. He noted that many of McCarthy's statements used language identical with that which appeared in various articles and letters Kohlberg wrote.

A further study of such similarities might be "very useful for the Senate and the country to help get the facts underlying Senator McCarthy's accusations and the facts behind those accusations," Lehman said.

He noted that McCarthy had charged Lattimore with following the Communist Party policy with respect to China, "down to the last comma."

Lehman added, "It is certainly worth studying, on the basis of the evidence submitted by Mr. Lattimore, whether Senator McCarthy is following some sort of a line, too, since there is an identify not only of commas, but of words.

"I only wonder what this line means and whose interests are being served by it. I am drawing no conclusions in advance. But I think it should be studied by the appropriate officials."

Lattimore's exhibit shows that a majority of the charges that McCarthy made against the Johns Hopkins professor and Far East expert orginated in articles Kohlberg wrote for the magazine China Monthly, with editorial and publication offices here and in New York, or in circular letters Kohlberg sent to members of the Institute of Pacific Relations.

Kohlberg, Lattimer testified, led a revolt in the IPR in 1946, and in a proxy fight won only 66 votes out of about 2000 members. Defeated, he then set up his rival organization, the American China Policy Association.

The exhibit further shows that most of McCarthy's charges against Ambassador-at-Large Philip C. Jessup, whom he also called a pro-Communist, originated in the same way.

For example, in the China Monthly of October, 1945, a Kohlberg article states that "Lattimore told a friend (Freda Utley) in London in 1936 that he almost lost his job for publishing an article by Harold Isaacs, a Trotskyite."

In a hearing before the Senate subcommittee, McCarthy quotes Miss Utley's book, using almost the same words, but identifying Lattimore's job as that of editor of the magazine Pacific Affairs, an IPR organ.

In a Senate speech on March 30, McCarthy quoted the "blurb" on the dust-cover of Lattimore's book, "Solution in Asia," to bolster his point that the author was pro-Communist.

In the China Monthly, again in October, 1945, Kohlberg quoted the same thing to the same effect.

McCarthy's promise to bring a witness who will swear that in 1936 Lattimore was an agent of the Soviet intelligence in the Far East also appears to reflect a charge of the same crime made earlier by Kohlberg.

McCarthy, on the Senate floor, made much of a letter written by Lattimore on June 15, 1943. The excerpts from it that McCarthy read purported to show him instructing another official of the Office of War Information to hire only Chinese Communists (the full text of the letter, produced later, showed Lattimore was giving exactly opposite instructions).

A similar allegation was made by Kohlberg in he China Monthly, issue of October, 1948. It read:

"Lattimore, head of OWI Far East Division, San Francisco, sent orders to his superior in New York . . . to fire all Chinese staff members who sympathized with their own government and replace them with Communists from the newly launched New China Daily News . . ."

In relating the story, McCarthy included in his speech the same error that Kohlberg made, to the effect that the letter was to Lattimore's superior. The recipient, Lattimore testified, was his opposite number, or equal, in New York.

With respect to the charges against Jessup, Kohlberg wrote in the China Monthly in August, 1939:

"Professor Jessup must therefore be honored by our State Department as the initiator of the smear campaign against Nationalist China and Chiang Kai-shek, and the originator of the myth of the democratic Chinese Communists."

In a Senate speech, McCarthy said:

"Professor Jessup must, therefore be credited by the American people with having pioneered the smear campaign against Nationalist China, and with being the originator of the myth of the 'democratic' Chinese Communists."

Expense Credit Ruled Illegal

after an interpretation is made of the court ruling.

The sweeping decision was made in the case of Edwin R. Motch, jr., a Cleveland businessman, who served here during the war as both a civilian and an Army officer in the Army-Navy Munitions Board. It was part of Motch's job to entertain and look after representatives of the Allied nations.

Motch deducted such expenses from his income taxes, one year as a civilian employe and the following year as an Army officer. Internal Revenue disallowed some of his expenses. Motch appealed to the Tax Court and won on all counts, but the bureau appealed and succeeded in getting the Tax Court decision reversed in the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati.

But in upholding the viewpoint of Internal Revenue the court went into the question of business expenses for public employes that hadn't even been raised by the participants.

The opinion was written by Justice John D. Martin sr., who first explained that the Revenue code permitted the deduction from income taxes of trade and business expenses. And then the justice wrote:

"We do not read the quoted section of the Internal Revenue Code as applicable to officers, agents, or employes of the United States in relation to work performed in an official capacity. A person to come within its terms must be engaged in private enterprise."

The ruling is clear-cut. There can be no argument over the above words. Justice Martin is of the firm opinion that Federal workers, military and civilian alike, can't deduct expenses connected with their jobs from income taxes like private workers.

Perhaps, however, Justice Martin didn't read the entire Revenue code. In another section, the law specifically states that trade or business expense is applicable to employes holding "public office." This section is in direct conflict with the court decision and it's the one that Revenue could use to ignore the Martin opinion, unless it is confirmed by the Supreme Court.

Also, the Congress a year ago took the position that the maximum travel allowance of $6 a day for Federal employes was insufficient and it boosted the rate to $8. It has cost most employes a dollar or so each day when they travel for Uncle Sam. They couldn't get out of their expenses from the Government and the only relief they could get was to deduct their out-of-pocket expenses from their Federal income taxes. The Revenue Bureau has allowed these and other job-connected deductions to Federal employe taxpayers.

Arlington Man Held in $200 Theft of Auto Tools

Arlington police yesterday charged a 20-year-old laborer for a carpet concern in the county with the theft of over $200 worth of auto tools from Bladen's Esso Station at 633 N. Glebe rd., Arlington.

Held for a preliminary hearing next Thursday in County Court is Laddie Dwight Owens, 3807 College le., Arlington. He was arrested early yesterday in an auto filled with loot by Officers William Corsini, and Michael Serafin, who recognized the license plate of his car as one parked near the scene of several earlier robberies.

Police said Owens had admitted breaking into various county firms on 10 different occasions.

Realize Risk, 'Prepare to Fight Our Way,' Gen. Eaker Urges

San Francisco, April 7 (AP).—Gen. Ira C. Eaker declared today the United States must realize its danger, and "prepare to fight a war our way, not theirs; in Russia with bombs, not in Turkey or Iran on the ground."

The former deputy commander of the Army Air Forces and wartime commander of the Allied Air Forces in the Mediterranean told the Commonwealth Club the United States should:

"1. Have a sound plan.

"2. Have the best weapon first—scientific research and development.

"3. Have a stockpile of atom bombs and the power to deliver them.

"4. Convince the Russians we mean to fight.

"5. Provide a trained manpower—universal military training.

"6. Marshal our industrial capacity—solve labor problems, eliminate strikes.

"7. Fight the war our way, not theirs—in Russia with bombs, not in Turkey or Iran on the ground. Destroy Russia's industrial capacity—no occupation.

"8. Destroy the fifth column in this country.

"9. Teach a new brand of patriotism."

Eaker said Russia could attack the United States by organizing a successful fifth column, "by military assault—bombardment by guided missiles and atom bombers, followed by airborne invasion," and "by inducing us to react to her moves in Europe or Asia, as Hitler led England to declare war against Germany.

"We need accurately to estimate our foe," Eaker declared. "Russian leadership is able, well-trained. It is ruthless. It is not Communist—it is a dictatorship."

Short's Crime Talk Is Hit by Rep. Irving

* * * * * * *

THOMAS C. HENNINGS
Denies Binaggio backing

Missouri Democrats yesterday slapped back at GOP attempts to link Kansas City gang slayings with Administration politics, as Republicans pressed for a Congressional probe.

Yesterday's developments:

1. In Congress, Rperesentative Leonard Irving (D) of Independence, Mo., Mr. Truman's home town, termed a speech by Representative Dewey Short (R., Mo.) a "vulgar and dastardly" attack on the President.

2. In Jefferson City. Mo., Gov. Forrest Smith dismissed with a laugh Short's charges that Charles Binaggio, Kansas City political and underworld power, was "bumped off" because he was "in the way" in the Democratic senatorial primary. Smith said Short's charges were "too ridiculous."

But at Key West, Fla., the White House was silent on Binaggio's slaying and on Washington's political repercussions.

Presidential Secretary Charles G. Ross had no comment on Short's speech and a demand by Representative W. Kingsland Macy (R., N. Y.) for a full inquiry into the "affiliation of crime and gangsters with politics in Kansas City.

White House sources said, however, the President was consulted by Attorney General J. Howard McGrath before McGrath instituted a series of grand jury investigations into interstate crime.

Replying to Short's attack, Representative Irving said he did not have to defend the President because Mr. Truman could take care of himself.

"I think it pretty cowardly and unprincipled to attempt, by innuendo and insinuation and deceit, to connect the President with the matter the gentleman has referred to," said Irving.

He asked if Short remembered "the stench that arose from the scandals" of the Republican regime headed by Warren G. Harding.

And he asked if he recalled "the notorious reputation" of Joplin, Mo., the only large city in Short's district.

"Can he recall during the days of prohibition that it (Joplin) was a mecca for sinners, an oasis in the desert for those of the Tri-State areas of Kansas, Oklahoma and Arkansas?" asked Irving.

Senate Administration leaders, who have held up a green light for the proposed Kefauver "full and complete" investigation of organized crime, mainly because they fear Republicans will make political capital of it, meanwhile predicted a decision on Tuesday.

On that day, Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.), whose resolution already has been cleared by two Senate committees and is pending on the Senate calendar, will be called into conference with the Senate Democratic policy committee.

Indications were Kefauver will be asked to spell out the limits of his inquiry, so it won't collide with a narrower crime investigation the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee is getting under way.

Senate Democratic Leader Scott Lucas (Ill.) commented only that he wouldn't "dodge" the investigation issue.

The Interstate Commerce Committee inquiry will get under way Tuesday morning without any formal Senate blessing, although Senate Interstate Commerce Chairman Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.), like Kefauver, has a resolution pending on the Senate calendar.

Tuesday's hearing will be opened by a subcommittee headed by Senator Ernest W. McFarland (D., Ariz.), to whom was referred one of two anticrime bills sent to Congress by Attorney General McGrath. The bill bans transmission of gambling information in interstate commerce. McGrath told McFarland yesterday he could not appear at the initial hearing, but will send a representative of the Attorney General's office. Wayne Coy, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, also will testify at the opening hearing. Later press, radio and television representatives will be called.

Myers Jury Gets Verdict

Georgia ave., had stated publicly on March 31 that Myers was guilty.

Judge Letts denied Laughlin's motion for a mistrial, but replaced Mrs. Nauman with alternate juror John W. Barnet, 43, 1679 Wisconsin ave., nw.

In his motion for a mistrial, Laughlin charged that a private investigator had heard Mrs. Nauman say "I can't see anything in the case favorable to Myers. As far as I am concerned he is convicted already," in Arbaugh's restaurant, where she is employed as a waitress.

The defense attorney identified the private detective as Chauncy James, an employe of the Bureau of the Census, where he knew Myers' brother.

Before final arguments began yesterday, the defense presented eight witnesses in 18 minutes, all of them residents of the 1300 block of Fairmont st., nw. All but one testified they heard no unusual noises on the night of January 4-5. One elderly witness testified he "doesn't hear very well," and another testified he was in Richmond, Va., on the night in question.

District Coroner Dr. A. Magruder Macdonald was also called as a defense witness, but said he had not been subpenaed as an expert, and he was on the stand less than two minutes.

The defense rested its case at 11:40 a. m., and Assistant Prosecutor William P. Arnold started summation 10 minutes later.

Laughlin took one hour and 15 minutes to sum up and Prosecutor John C. Conliff delivered the Government rebuttal in 15 minutes. Judge Letts' instructions took 25 minutes.

In his instructions to the jury, Judge Letts said that Myers had pleaded not guilty "and has entered an additional plea of intoxication."

"Voluntary intoxication affords no excuse for a crime committed under its influence" generally, Judge Letts said. "In order to justify the crime, the defendant must have been so drunk as to be incapable of forming the intent to commit the crime."

The judge told the jurors they could find the defendant "guilty as charged," or "guilty, but we do not find that Nina Jean Campbell died in consequence of the defendant's act," or "not guilty."

Myers is charged with performing the abortion in the apartment of his girl friend, nurse Ruth Childs, at 1321 Fairmont st. nw., on the night of January 4.

Government testimony showed that Mrs. Campbell's aunt, Mrs. Peggy Earnshaw, arranged the abortion with Myers, and the two women went to the Fairmont st. apartment at 9 p. m., January 4.

Miss Childs and Mrs. Earnshaw both testified they left the defendant alone with the young Hillsdale, Md., mother shortly after 9. Myers had consumed nearly a fifth of whisky at the time, according to his own testimony. It was the last time Nina Jean Campbell was seen alive.

Outbreak to Avenge Binaggio Killing Feared

find out more about his out-of-town contacts. Police said they gave no information of value.

There was that ominous silence which led the Kansas City Star to say:

"Such reticence indicates that the local underworld plans to take care of the double murder of its leaders in its own way. Investigating forces therefore found themselves in a race against time to forestall a blood bath here."

It happened before in Kansas City. There was John Lazia, the northside politician and racketeer who was wiped out in an ambush slaying back in 1933.

Gangland was quick to avenge that one. Jimmy Needles, who was supposed to have planned the spot slaying, was killed in a burst of fire. Jack Gregory's disappearance still is one of the choice stories of the underworld. Gregory was driving the getaway car.

Gregory was taken from a hospital here, arraigned on a charge and then released on bond against his will. He never was seen again. Some say he was tortured and then given a watery burial in the Missouri river encased in a concrete coffin.

The St. Louis Star-Times said Binaggio had been told there that gangsters and gamblers at that end of the State were "tired of waiting;" that he had better deliver.

That trip three months ago to St. Louis had a strange effect on Binaggio. Binaggio appeared under a severe nervous strain. His onetime calm was broken on occasions by outbreaks of temper. He had let the word out that he would like to quit.

The St. Louis Star-Times said the stumbling block to the underworld's plans was Governor Forrest Smith's appointment of a political unknown, William Holzhausen, as head of the St. Louis police board. It said Binaggio, who had supported Smith for Governor, thought he could handle Holzhausen but instead found a "stubbornly righteous man—almost a reformer."

The story was that Binaggio played for time—and the gamblers became fully aware of it.

Police Chief Henry W. Johnson said he was "convinced that the killings resulted from the activities of one or both of the men outside of Kansas City.

The heat was on in other places, however. A Federal grand jury, investigating underworld activities, had questioned both Binaggio and Gargotta. Nineteen slaying here in the last five years have been left unsolved.

One of them, that of Wolf C. Rimann, also had a St. Louis touch. Rimann, a golf club manager with coin machine and liquor interests, was shot down by two gangsters on a downtown street a year ago. They fled in a car, later found abandoned. Its origin was traced to St. Louis. But there the trail grew cold.

Police today had uncovered no clews worth talking about. No weapons had been left at the scene. The gangland execution appeared to have been done coolly, the sign of an expert.

Gargotta, himself a man who grew by violence, may have sensed the end before Binaggio. He appeared to have been running for his life when a well-aimed bullet, one to the base of the brain, brought him down as he clawed wildly at a venetian blind on the club room door.

Meanwhile, it appeared the Pendergast organization, now headed by Jim Pendergast, was willing to make no efforts for a reconciliation with the north side group which under Binaggio had broken away and challenegd the Pendergast group for Democratic leadership here.

President Truman was a member of the Democratic Club here headed by Jim Pendergast, his close friend and a nephew of the late Tom Pendergast.

Funeral services for Binaggio will be held at the Holy Rosary Catholic Church here at 10 a. m. Monday. Definite arrangements have not been completed for the services of Gargotta although it is believed they also will be held Monday at the same church.

Murder Most Foul

More power to the Metropolitan Police in their all-out manhunt for the assailants who murdered two night watchmen in Lansburgh's Department Store early yesterday. These cold-blooded killings constitute as revolting a crime as the District has experienced in a long time, and precisely because of their brutal character they may lead to something drastic. Undoubtedly police will do their best to run them down, if for no other reason than that they have received a lot of attention.

What has not received so much attention is the general condition of which this is a by-product. Washington ranked eighth in all cities in the United States in the number of murders reported last year, but it ranked first in the number of aggravated assaults. Violence condoned or sloughed off in the lesser category of assault of course invites violence of a more serious nature. It is no exaggeration to say that the unsuspecting citizen on the street is in more danger of having his head bashed in or ribs broken in Washington than even in those cities with gangster-ridden reputations. Assaults have occurred virtually on the grounds of the White House, and police have acknowledged that gangs are known to prey in that area. Why should known marauding thugs be tolerated anywhere? And how many assaults are there that for one reason or another do not find their way into the formal reports?

Police recently have been concentrating a good deal of effort on the assault problem, but there is altogether too much complacent assurance from the top that Washington's crime rate is nothing to get alarmed about. Patently, crime here is getting out of hand. Unless the House District Subcommittee comes forward with some stark and forthright recommendations, apparently not much help can be expected from Congress at this time. But even in a voteless city, if enough indignant citizens become aroused, they can force the Commissioners to initiate action to get to the roots of what has become a civic disgrace. It is time the citizens became aroused.

No Spies

The statement by Seth W. Richardson, chairman of the Loyalty Review Board, that three years of intensive screening had produced "not one single case" of espionage anywhere in the Federal Government ought to bring reassurance to all Americans save those few who, like Senator McCarthy, will consider it a bitter disappointment. Mr. Richardson is a man who is neither naive about Communists nor indifferent to the national security nor subject to a charge, even by Senator McCarthy, of being in the pay of the Kremlin.

No evidence even "directing toward espionage" has been found by the FBI, Mr. Richardson told the Senate Judiciary Subcommittee Wednesday, either in the three million Federal employe files checked under the loyalty program or in the approximately 10,000 full field investigations conducted in respect of every individual about whom any derogatory information was uncovered. This result will not be surprising, of course, to any save the McCarthys. It is in accordance with the presumption of most Americans that their fellow citizens, however divergent their views, are devoted to the United States. We hope that the record revealed by Mr. Richardson and backed up with particular reference to the State Department by Brig. Gen. Conrad E. Snow will bring new heart to employes demoralized by what Owen Lattimore aptly called "the machine gun of irresponsible publicity in Joseph McCarthy's hands."

Liberation

The United States is at last ready to play a responsible part in dealing with the international problem of the war's refugees. The Senate's action Wednesday night in adopting the Kilgore version of the displaced persons bill—essentially a counterpart of the humane legislation passed by the House a year ago—will enable this country to do its fair share in resettling the DPs, and to do it without the odious religious discrimination that characterizes the law now in force.

The amendments to the existing law adopted by the Senate will raise to 344,000 the total number of DPs to be admitted to the United States over a three-year period. They will eliminate the administratively awkward and morally objectionable system of priorities under which preferences for Balts and for persons with agricultural experience were used to mask a deliberate exclusion of Jews and Catholics. They will advance the "cut-off" date, another disguised form of discrimination, from December, 1945, to January, 1949, and thus make thousands of victims of religious and political persecution eligible for admission to the United States.

Most of these reforms were stubbornly resisted by Senator McCarran, who exploited a now pervasive fear of all outsiders that must be reckoned a strange phenomenon in a Nation largely built by immigration. The reforms were won on a thoroughly "unpartisan" basis by a coalition of Democrats and Republicans. Their victory will make liberation real at last for the pitiful, uprooted thousands who have been awaiting deliverance in the allied occupation zones of Germany and Austria ever since VE-Day.

Challenge To OAS

Considerable confusion has been created in the Organization of American States over the forensic endeavors of Cuba to avoid a share of the blame for strife in the Caribbean. The Cubans make the point that it is the denial of "democracy" in other countries, notably the Dominican Republic, which leads to tensions and plotting by exiles. They argue for undefined "controls" to reestablish democracy, they assert that the OAS investigators were not vigorous enough in condemning actions of the Dominican Republic, and they take exception to the establishment of a watchdog commission to insure compliance with OAS recommendations.

It is quite true that the investigating commission did not assess degrees of blame in the report detailing Dominican aggression against Haiti and Cuban and Guatemalan complicity in plotting against the Dominican Republic. The fact is that after protest the Cuban government did act in time to prevent the launching of an expedition. It is also true that the repressions of Trujillo contribute to Caribbean unrest, and that the Trujillo regime is antithetical to the democratic principles recognized in the OAS charter and upheld in the report. But we know of no way to enforce democracy; any controls to insure internal democratic practices would imply a type of intervention which most American states would justifiably find repugnant.

We give the Cubans credit for sincerity; but, even so, their appeal amounts to an attempt to evade the issue. The most basic of all considerations in hemisphere relations is respect for international obligations. If the OAS later wants to tackle means of promoting representative government in the Americas, well and good. We ourselves should like to see a genuine international investigation of the arms traffic and perhaps more moral pressure for human rights. But we would like to ask how the OAS can get anywhere in these other respects if the OAS cannot meet the first and elementary problem in hemisphere relations of external aggression. The one fundamental recommendation which simply cannot be ignored is the establishment of the watchdog commission—and the commission ought to be backed with the authority of the organization in whatever measures are necessary to insure maintenance of the peace. Members of the OAS Council have an international trust, and that is to meet the issue firmly, without fear of hurting someone's feelings.

Atlantic Pact

On the anniversary of the signing of the North Atlantic Treaty, it was gratifying to hear Secretary Acheson emphasize the political and economic as well as the military aspect of this collective instrument. A common defense is basic, calling for day-to-day strengthening; but, side by side with this endeavor, work on Article II, the constructive complement of the military alliance, needs to be undertaken. To this article our Canadian friends attach prime importance, and wisely and rightly.

Article II reads:

> The parties will contribute toward the further development of peaceful and friendly international relations by strengthening their free institutions, by bringing about a better understanding of the principles upon which these institutions are founded, and by promoting conditions of stability and well-being. They will seek to eliminate conflict in their international economic policies and will encourage economic collaboration between any or all of them.

This is a command to the Atlantic signatories to get together in their polity and their economy as well as in their defense. Mr. Hoffman is leading the battle for economic integration. In his case, the frame of reference is limited to Europe, but the appointment of Mr. Gordon Gray is a sign, in our opinion, that a wider integration to the whole of the Atlantic community is at least envisaged. At any rate, we hope so. On the political front, Secretary Acheson says he intends to press for the dovetailing of political policy at the forthcoming meeting of Foreign Ministers. This indicates that a long-awaited drive to carry Article II into effect is on.

After Devaluation

The first quarter of this year in Britain shows that the sterling area earned a net gold and dollar surplus of 40 million dollars, as contrasted with deficits of 330 million dollars and 539 million dollars in the first and third quarters of 1949. This pronounced improvement in the sterling area's balance of payments position is gratifying evidence that progress is being made toward closing the dollar gap. However, Sir Stafford Cripps warns that some of these gains may be temporary, due to seasonal increases in dollar sales of wool and cocoa and the resumption of buying that had been held up in anticipation of devaluation.

What Sir Stafford is relying upon chiefly are reductions in dollar imports to improve the trade position of the sterling area. "The reduction in the United Kingdom's own expenditure on imports from the dollar area . . . together with similar successful action by our partners in the sterling area," he described as a "major achievement and a triumph of cooperative effort by commonwealth countries of the sterling area. On its maintenance in the period immediately ahead of us," he added, "depends much of our hope for the future balance of our payments with the dollar area." Evidently Sir Stafford has little faith in the American formula for correcting trade imbalances by an expansion of exports that would enable the sterling area to earn more dollars.

Rigorous economy in dollar expenditures is undoubtedly required at the present time to help bridge the dollar gap. But more selling as well as less buying is also essential to insure an expansion of trade that will enable Great Britain and the rest of the sterling area to become independent of external aid and prosperous at the same time.

Unshackling Science

Senate-House conferees did a good day's work in knocking out the repressive dragnet loyalty investigation tacked on the national science foundation bill. Still in the bill is a sweeping loyalty oath. This seems to us unnecessary, but far less objectionable than the crippling Smith amendment. Elimination of that amendment is praisworthy, first, because it rescues the FBI from the unwanted role of both fact-finder and judge. Under the Smith amendment the FBI would have had to assume a responsibility totally out of character—and protested by J. Edgar Hoover—in certifying that all foundation employes and recipients of fellowships were loyal.

Second and more important, the action removes from science itself a shackle of terrifying significance. There is no conceivable justification for the investigation of private citizens receiving scientific research grants in wholly nonsecret fields. They are not Government employes any more than social security pensioners or students studying abroad with Government aid are Government employes. To include them within the scope of loyalty investigations would have been to debase the whole meaning of loyalty tests in really sensitive jobs.

Furthermore, the Smith amendment would have called for disqualification not after an over-all evaluation, but on the basis of a single association, past or present, with any organization proscribed by the Attorney General's list. The upshot of this sort of blacklisting would have been to make orthodox thinking a major criterion of acceptability. Yet original thinking, the free search for truth in every field, is the whole stuff of the scientific process. If the men and women with questioning minds—the persons on whom scientific advance really depends—were driven away through fear of humiliation and smear, the resultant stereotyped science foundation would be deprived of the most important contribution it can make to real national security.

Crime Shenanigans

The real reason for the foot-dragging of Senate Majority Leader Lucas on the Kefauver interstate crime investigation is now out, and it reflects no credit on the Administration. As we have noted before in this column, the Democrats are afraid that the Republicans will use the Judiciary Committee investigation to embarrass the Administration for its connections with big city political machines. Such incidents as the murder of a former Pendergast aide and his associate in Kansas City increase the interest in those connections. The danger would, of course, always be present that unscrupulous committee members might divert the investigation to partisan ends. But the Democrats are formally in control of Congress, and if the Republicans ran away with the investigation it would be for want of Democratic leadership. By all means let there be rules of procedure agreed upon in advance to avoid another McCarthy disgrace. But then let the investigation proceed, no matter who is hit. It is essential for Congress to know the facts about the operations of the crime syndicates before it can consider wisely the legislation proposed by Attorney General McGrath. And the Democrats will hardly improve their stature with the people by leaving the implication that they are opposing the investigation because they have something to hide.

Veto The Kerr Bill

After the parliamentary trick by which the Kerr natural gas bill was passed by the House, the President ought to scrutinize the measure with unusual care. That bill would remove so-called independent producers of natural gas—who account for some 70 percent of the sales—from the regulatory supervision of the Federal Power Commission. In so doing it would make the remainder of natural gas regulation virtually meaningless. What good would there be in regulating the charges of pipeline companies or gas distributors if producers of this important commodity, which is recognized as a public utility, were free to raise prices at will? This is special interest legislation if there ever was any. We urge the President to reaffirm the supremacy of the public interest by vetoing it.

Loan To Argentina

It is inspiring to see that loans are being considered for Argentina. The United States tradition of never letting silly ideological beliefs stand in the way of commercial interests is worshiped as faithfully as in 1914, when U. S. troops entered Vera Cruz. It is perhaps the only facet of our foreign policy that remains consistent after 150 years.

The whining of a few eccentrics will have to be expected. They will say that Peron is a dictator, that freedom of speech, action, belief, and the press is nonexistent in Argentina. They will try to cite the immigration of prominent Nazis just before the last war's end, the obvious reluctance of the United Nations to admit Argentina as a member. They will say that a loan to Peron violates every democratic principle in which we profess to believe.

But despite the childish outbursts that will arise, our American businessmen will prevail. And, besides, Peron has given his word of honor that with the loan La Prensa and La Nacion will be allowed to continue publication.

Carter G. Woodson

Thanks for your April 6 editorial on Charles R. Drew. May I suggest that it be followed by an editorial on Carter G. Woodson? It has been my privilege to close the eyes of two great Americans, Ernest E. Just and Carter G. Woodson. In his quiet way, Carter Woodson may have been the most important Negro of his generation.

Through his Association for the Study of Negro Life and History and his sacrificing labor as a publisher he has given the Negro in America, beginning with the children in the elementary schools, an historical basis for pride in their race and dignity in themselves in a complex social situation which too often has destroyed both pride and dignity. The immediate cause of Dr. Woodson's death was the shock of the loss of Charles R. Drew.

Dr. Woodson possessed a brilliant mind and a strong will—but a brilliant mind and a strong will would never have accomplished what he accomplished without this other factor—his character, which carried him from the coal mines of West Virginia through the Sorbonne in Paris, to Harvard Graduate School, to the establishment of the Association for the Study of Negro Life and History and to his world-wide interest and research in the contributions made by the Negro to world history. This peculiar combination of a giant intellect and a giant character spells the reason, in the judgment of the writer, for what this distinguished scholar accomplished during his life.

Arlington Farms

When I looked at the front page of the real estate section in one of the Sunday papers I wondered if the Federal Housing Administration gave a thought to the many lower grade Government employes who are looking for places to live now. Arlington Farms residents have been notified of its closing. The Farms residents are mostly lower grade workers.

Another thing: the Y.W.C.A., McLean Gardens and other places, even boarding houses, have age limits, some of 27 years, others of 35. Why can't one or two Arlington Farms halls be kept open for ladies over 35 years of age? K. W. L.

Cruelty At Easter

"Cruelty at Eastertime" is the title of a little pamphlet printed by the American Humane Education Society.

It seems out of keeping with the thought of Easter, but it informs of the sad fact of the thousands of little baby chicks, ducklings and bunnies bought each year by business-centered merchants and sold to thoughtless adults for playthings for little children. This cruel practice has been stopped in many counties and cities of various States.

But we should not need the force of law to be made kind. We should be glad to teach our children, small and large, that baby barnyard creatures belong with natural mothers on the farms in the country and that they can get just as much pleasure without being unkind from the many beautiful toy chicks, bunnies and other little animals with which the hundreds of stores in D. C. and everywhere else are crowded.

Personal Habits

To date Senator McCarthy has not proved any of his accusations in public, but he has smeared people—whether justifiably or not, only future investigation can prove. He reached the height of his little drama when he said "some of the documents revealed ugly personal habits on the part of some of the people involved."

The Senator's remark smacks too much of what most people would term idle malicious gossip indulged in by those who like to talk about their neighbor over the back fence. I believe the Senator should define in public just what he means by "ugly personal habits," lest we get the wrong impression. However, what bearing, if any, does an individual's personal habits have on the case of whether he is, or is not, a Communist?

"Two Horns To G. M. Dilemma"

I should like to comment on J. A. Livingston's interesting article of March 19, entitled "Two Horns to G. M. Dilemma." Mr. Livingston, after commenting on General Motors' huge sales and profit records in 1949, stressed the dilemma in which the company finds itself. On the one hand, he says, wage increases would set higher wage patterns for every company in the industry and hence put a serious squeeze on companies which are not as successful financially as G.M. On the other hand, lower prices by General Motors might put other auto producers out of business. According to Mr. Livingston, either course threatens to lessen competition in the automotive industry and render the corporation more liable to attack on monopoly charges.

While Mr. Livingston has posed an interesting journalistic question, it must be readily apparent that there is no real logic in what he says. Mr. Livingston's reasoning would rule out competitive pricing and improvement of wages in any industry where one or more large companies commanded a sizeable share of the market, and in which smaller companies which were less efficient or less successful financially were operating in the field. It would apply, not only to the automobile industry, but also to the steel industry, the electrical industry, the meat-packing industry, petroleum refining, farm machinery, and many others. In other words, the way to preserve competition is to abandon competitive practices!

First, with respect to the facts. It is not very realistic to pose the competitive question primarily in terms of General Motors versus Kaiser-Frazer, Hudson and Packard. The question must be posed primarily in terms of General Motors versus Chrysler and Ford, because the combined output of these three giants of the industry accounts for more than 80 percent of all passenger car sales and about 75 percent of all truck sales. Surely Mr. Livingston would not argue that Chrysler, Ford, or even Studebaker are not in a position to be competitive with General Motors either with respect to price cuts or wage increases.

Mr. Livingston has assumed that vehicles account for approximately one half of General Motors' profits, and he has concluded from this that General Motors earned $205 before taxes and $118 after taxes per vehicle sold. I haven't followed all his calculations, but I am sure that his assumption is erroneous. General Motors' sales in 1949 were $5.7 billion. The company sold more than 2,764,000 vehicles. If we assume an average sale price per vehicle of $1500 (apparently a reasonable figure when one considers the various price lines involved), it is indicated that automobile sales accounted for about $4,150,000,000, or 73 percent of General Motors' total sales.

It is difficult to believe that 50 percent of General Motors' profit of about $1,200,000,000 before taxes could have been earned on only 27 percent, or $1.55 billion, of total sales. I think it much more likely that General Motors' profits on vehicle sales would be about 70 percent of its total profits, in line with the sales percentage accounted for by the vehicles. This assumption would indicate an average profit per vehicle of over $300 before taxes and of about $170 after taxes, figures sizeably in excess of those calculated by Mr. Livingston.

In my opinion, the real dilemma which the General Motors Corp. faces was unwittingly pointed up by Mr. Sloan and Mr. Wilson of the corporation on the occasion of the Mid-Century Motorama in New York not long ago, at which the 1950 models were introduced. Mr. Sloan stated that widespread purchasing by the public was essential to preserve prosperity. Mr. Wilson stated, on the same occasion, that a slowdown of non-necessary purchases by the American people would quickly result in a depression. This recognition on the part of the top General Motors executives of the essentiality of a continued and expanding high level of consumption to the Nation's economy and to the profitability of business enterprise applies directly to the employes and to the customers of the corporation itself. Higher wages for General Motors employes and lower prices for General Motors customers constitute the chief means by which the General Motors Corp. and the industrial community as well, can contribute toward continued high level operations, a full employment economy, and continued, though more reasonable, profits.

Cosmic Test Of Easter

Visitor's View

THE FLYING saucer scientist, whose arrival as a refugee from a planet about to be destroyed by war was recently reported in this column, stood by the Tidal Basin watching with puzzled eyes the scene about him.

"I sense something unusual—and very pleasant," he told me in his new, quickly acquired English. "Life, color, gayety . . . a fresh, incandescent quality in the air, trees, grass, flowers throbbing with vigor . . . people so alive, bedecked, exhilarated, happy. All this," he said wistfully, "is like the peaceful, luminous planet I set out to find."

"It's the feel of Easter," I explained.

"Of what?"

"A religious festival we and people of many other Earth nations observe."

"How long will it last?"

"Through Sunday."

He shuddered. "Then back to the squabbling and turmoil, the overhanging tension of anger, fear, hatred—the life I left behind. But is it not incongruous, this tenuous interlude of beauty when Monday your headlines will again scream charges against your leaders or reports on whether your newest weapons will be ready by 1953?"

"YOU HAVE been greatly disillusioned here?"

"Naturally, hearing nothing but the roar of armaments, the yapping at each other of human pigmies—even in the more enlightened nations . . . By the way, what does your Easter festival celebrate?"

"The resurrection from the dead of Jesus, sometimes called the Prince of Peace, whom Christians believe came to earth nearly 2000 years ago in human form to redeem man from sin and death."

"Did he preach a future life? And purport to raise the dead?"

"Yes."

"Ah—a coincidence! A similar being was recently on my plant, promising life beyond our expected annihilation. He too purported to raise the dead."

"Was there any evidence?"

"We—ll there were some apparent cases. But our scientists—and remember we are highly advanced in science—decided that these beings raised themselves from the dead—by purely natural means of course?"

"Didn't this excite everyone?"

"No. Technology has been our god so long we have lost our talent for the intangible. Then nobody had time to bother. We were mobilized for total war, pushing ahead breathlessly to beat the enemy in making the terrible weapon that was to destroy all life. But here I take it many people believed in this Jesus, in fact still do."

"Oh yes. Millions will flock to the churches tomorrow—many of whom go only once a year—to reaffirm their faith that He lived after death and that they will do likewise."

"But if so many believe in this miracle-working God, why don't they call on Him to save their planet from war?"

"We—ll er I suppose a good many do——"

"Say, I'm a scientist. A logical being. This situation doesn't make sense. You say millions in this and other countries will crowd churches tomorrow to testify to their faith in a god who can work miracles. Then why aren't millions on their knees constantly, in churches, offices, homes, on street corners, in your Capitol—praying for a miracle that will avert a terrible war for which you are spending billions to prepare?"

"Well—er of course everybody is so terribly rushed and—well I suppose a lot of people realize the miracle they'd have to pray for would be that mankind, beginning with themselves, be changed—that is inside."

"Well?" The visitor's shrewd, gimlet eyes were still questioning.

"But you might be surprised," I ventured, in a sudden offensive, "to discover how many are doing just that! Such things don't get into the headlines or on the radio. They're not ranted or argued about in Congress. But a little leaven can do a lot in a batch of dough."

"You can't change human nature!"

"How would you know? You on your doomed planet with your god technology never tried. You didn't even make a start in developing the forces of imagination, thought, prayer, faith, love—which are now just beginning to invade the laboratories of our physical scientists. Don't give up on earth yet. Stick around awhile. You might be surprised."

"Me-Too" Health Plan

If the President and Mr. Ewing are as clever as they seem to think, why don't they sponsor a bill to provide medical services for persons with tuberculosis, hopeless cancer and other untouchables that existing health insurance plans shun like leprosy?

Their me-too copy of the British monstrosity rejects commonsense practice and is economically unsound. The skill of a physician is too dearly bought to make him the unhappy middleman in free acquisition of a hot water bottle for Aunt Minnie (whose old one leaks a bit).

Who will object to the Government underwriting the excessive costs of such illness? The hapless family facing bankruptcy? The hospital dunning them for the unpaid bill? Or the doctor who carries them on the "cuff?"

Asia Losing Its Old Order To Communism

By Vicente Villamin

IS AMERICA losing Asia? Or is Asia losing America? Is the struggle in Asia between Americanism and communism? Or is it between Russian communism and the Old Order in Asia?

"We (Americans) Are Losing Asia Fast"—that is the title of an article in the Saturday Evening Post by Mr. Stewart Alsop, a writer who recently made a flying visit in Asia. He says that Asia is being lost by America to communism, which means to Russia.

One does not lose anything, tangible or intangible, unless he owns or possesses it. What is America losing in Asia since she does not own or possess it physically or ideologically?

Governments in Asia may be at odds with America on certain questions, but it is safe to state that the Asian peoples are friendly and grateful to America for solid reasons. Of all the "foreign devils," referring to all Western foreigners, the American has been the least selfish and the most helpful. Those peoples have a suppressed fear of the Russians, who say "comrades" in one side of the mouth and shout "obey" in the other.

Asia never has had any democracy, the sort America has, to lose to communism. Every realist knows that basic fact. It has its own philosophy of life, individual, family and national, that is neither communistic nor democratic.

WHAT ASIA is losing to communism is its very soul — the Old Order, which is its very own and its most precious possession. Asia, not America is the loser. But America, cleverly aided and abetted by Russia, is creating a delusion for herself and confusion among the Asiatics by seeming to be the loser.

That is why many Asiatics place the responsibility for their ultimate salvation on America instead of on themselves, and also why America is causing so much disappointment to them today. But that is not all the harm that is being done. America is unwittingly preventing the Asiatics from fully realizing that it is their very soul, their Old Order, that they are losing to communism.

Therefore, let this be crystal clear: Russia is ousting from Asia the Asiatic old order rather than America, which is hardly there. Russia wants the world to know that she is driving out "imperialist America" from Asia for the good of Asia. And apparently America, an unknowing victim of Russian propaganda, believes that Russia is doing just that and she worries about her world mission to save democracy and about her own world security. But the plain, common-sense fact is that Russia is planting communism in Asia for her own good by suppressing its old culture, its religion, its civilization, and its time-honored way of life.

It can not be too strongly emphasized that, largely as the result of the clash of American and Russian actions and propaganda, Asia does not yet comprehend that the issue it is facing is not Americanism against Russianism, but Russian communism against the Asiatic Old Order. When Asia comes to realize that this is the issue, it will find itself more consciously, assert its innate nationalism, and consider Russia as another "foreign devil" to be resisted, shunned and rejected.

RUSSIA's work of proselyting Asia is effective because she has a definite objective, which is to establish her authority and her system there, to have it in her political orbit and under the "protection" of the Russian armed forces. On the contrary, America's counsels on Asia are chaotically diverse, contradictory and nebulous.

Because the real issue is befuddled, Asia does not realize clearly another tremendous fact. It is that Asia is losing America, the only foreign country that can and is willing to help it substantially and unselfishly. Asia does not seem to know of Russia's poverty in material things and in spirit to be of help. Asia should know that Russia's plan is to help herself to the human and economic resources of Asia. When Asia loses America for Russia, it will result in the intensification of its poverty and the restriction or constriction of its liberty.

What is the logical philosophy of action for America in the present situation?

If America's influence in support of the Old Order is to be felt in Asia, she must make more positive disclosure of her motivations and objectives. As a part of that disclosure, America must make unequivocably clear that those motivations and objectives are radically different from Russia's, citing historical and contemporary precedents and interpreting their respective purposes in the light of their comparative natural resources and their financial and industrial potentials. Asia will see the elemental wisdom of being with rich and liberal America than with poor and totalitarian Russia.

ASIATIC governments may become communistic or "people's" government because presently nationalism is defeating itself. But when the people come to know fully and clearly the mission of Russian communism, on the one hand, and the loss of American assistance and collaboration, on the other, they will present such formidable resistance to the new order, even if it be silent at least in the beginning, that the new Communist leaders of Asia will be compelled to relax their relations with the Russians and to reject both their actual and subtle domination of Asian life and affairs. That would be Asia's day of revindication and regeneration.

What the Old Order in Asia is differs with each country. But at bottom it is identical. It is the quintessence of thousands of years of both recorded and unrecorded history. Between it and Russian communism there is much more conflict than harmony and they are fundamentally beyond conciliation or even synchronization. They are oil and water.

In China, the Old Order was represented by the Chiang Kai-shek government. That government had done or did not do many things that made it unrepresentative of that order and the people lost faith in it. It is the loss of that faith, which infected even the army, that helped the Communists to win.

In Indo-China, the Communists are good tacticians enough to say that they are fighting French colonialism and thus native nationalism, the Old Order, is left dormant and beguiled. The political expedient of putting up a former royal playboy as the head of the country, when everyone knows that his main support is the French army of 150,000 men, will inevitably be declared a failure.

IN KOREA, the Communists have separated themselves and created North Korea. In South Korea the Japanese order has been expunged and under President Rhee there is a reassertion of the Old Order. America is directly helping that country to help herself.

In India, the Old Order is Indian, which was influenced at the top by British philosophy and culture. With its present political independence and its circumspect and cautious leaders, India is a formidable bulwark against communism.

In Indonesia, the Old Order clings around the broad conceptions of Buddhism and Mohammedanism built on an agricultural and oceanic economy. Four hundred years of Dutch colonialism have served both to develop the country materially and to accentuate the nationalism of the Indonesians to the point that many of the present leaders of the Indonesian republic fought against the Dutch in the last war on the side of the Japanese, for whom they do not have much love. Indonesian nationalism, the efflorescence of the Old Order, will beat communism hands down.

In the Philippines, American democracy has taken deep root and communism is being fought according to the democratic rules—enlightenment instead of suppression. The preservation and strengthening of the Philippine democracy will serve to make it a visible model for all the peoples of Asia to emulate.

IN THE face of militant communism, fighting down discredited nationalism and old-fashioned colonialism and encountering disorganization and disintegration, Asia seems fated to succumb and be annexed to Russia's ideological domination. If that happens, it would be but a transient condtion, for when the peoples of Asia find out that they have lost America, lost their age-old liberties, and have acquired Russia, its poverty, its severity and its regimentation, they will rally to the Old Order and, with their leaders, the wiser for the experience they will expunge communism from their life and tell Russia to quit Asia for good and all. America, either voluntarily or upon request, expressed or implied, could help powerfully the Asiatic peoples to preserve their Old Order in an atmosphere of the present-day concept of liberty, opportunity and independence.

Easter In An Insecure World

TO MANY of us it must seem at times as though the solid, secure, friendly world that we have always known were disappearing as we stood by helpless. Things happen and are mirrored briefly in the headlines that a year ago or even a few months ago seemed inconceivable.

Childs

In peacetime the Atomic Energy Commission orders the burning of copies of a magazine containing an article by a distinguished physicist who says that the article told nothing not already published and on file. Almost daily there are accounts of the hundreds of thousands or millions of human beings who can be scared to death by a single atomic attack.

What happens, I suppose, is that finally a kind of indifference prevails. You hear people say, "Oh, I can't do anything about it anyway. So why even talk about it?"

The promises of security in the past were so glib. Poverty would be abolished at home by a few laws. And, of course, since we were such a superior people, living in a continent of perpetual richness destined always to be immune from the world's ills, nothing could touch us.

At the beginning of Lent on Ash Wednesday, Bishop Angus Dun held a special service in Washington Cathedral that dealt with man's dilemma in the Atomic Age. The sermon Bishop Dun gave on that occasion—it was more nearly a long prayer—spoke directly to the doubt in men's hearts. Those who heard it were deeply moved and many have since requested copies.

THERE IS, unfortunately, not room to give it all. But here is the conclusion to that prayer:

"Surely, God is seeking to say to us as He said to men in other times, 'Do not expect of me some easy miracle or sign that shall cost you nothing in self-scrutiny or sacrifice or repentance. There is no way to peace save the way of righteousness. I have in times past used a godless people as the scourge of them that thought themselves godly. Do not talk too glibly of how good it would be if only others would live by My Son's Sermon on the Mount. Do you walk by that difficult and narrow way? This kind of devil with which you are harassed cometh out only by prayer. Have you Americans tried much prayer, you churchmen, you statesmen, you Congressmen? By prayer I do not mean a kind of frightened mass-pressure on the Deity to get you out of your hole. I mean the disposition of the spirit My Son tried to teach you when he gave you His prayer. I mean the disposition of the heart and will which can truly say, "Our Father, father of us all, thy will be done—not ours," Then you will be able to go on, "Give us—all of us, our daily bread." For you will know that to me the daily bread and the security and the freedom of all those others are just as important as the daily bread and the security and the freedom of you Americans. You might be able to go on. "Forgive us as we forgive." It is to that disposition that I promise a good answer.'

"SURELY, the God whose speaking we would hear is trying to say to us, 'Though you should by your cleverness gain some temporary security in the world, what will it profit you if you lose your souls? You are made to walk in the light of open dealings and mutual trust and good personal relationships. Beware lest in your anxious search for security you move into a life of spreading secrecy and distrust and darkness.'

"I am trying to hear God's speaking. Do you try, too, and share with your neighbors what you hear!

"It is not given to us men to know the future with all certainty or to build that which is forever and forever. It is our part to live in the days and the years that are granted to us in the quiet strength of those who know that though the storms of our troubled world rage horribly, yet the Lord who dwelleth on high is mightier.

"We shall pray that America may be strong, strong in arm and strong in courage, resolved to make no final peace with oppression. Let us pray still more that America may enter into the blessedness of the peacemakers. That can be only if we are delivered from our infantile egotism, our delusions of superiority, from the love of ease and softness and surrendered to the creative purpose of Him who came among us to bring peace.

"We live in a dark time, but not as men without hope. 'Earth might be fair.' Yes, even now it might be fair.

"In our darkness we turn to Him who bore the human name of Jesus and in whom faith has seen the wisdom of God. And we see that the loveliest life, the fairest life, the life that did most to make the earth fair, was a brief and broken one lived with a deep sense of early insecurity. And we are strengthened."

Crain Surrenders In School Fund Deficit

Harry M. Crain, 51, former State Department employe, has surrendered to Colorado authorities who charge that while he was an associate professor of English at the Colorado School of Mines $2400 was lifted from a student's fund in his control.

Crain was arrested here while he was awaiting assignment in Korea as a $7710-a-year English instructor. In Municipal Court yesterday, a fugitive warrant against him was canceled because of the surrender.

THE LIFE OF CHRIST IN PICTURE FORM

ON EASTER SUNDAY, The Washington Post will publish one of the most striking religious pictures ever painted—a panoramic canvas of the Life of Christ. This picture starts with the mission of the angel Gabriel to Nazareth and concludes with the announcement of the Resurrection to the two Marys. Forty-six episodes are portrayed in all, yet in this full account of the story there is a remarkable artistic and dramatic unity. The artist, Ayres Houghtelling, has succeeded in creating a modern version of the story-telling technique found in the tapestries of the middle ages.

This picture will be reproduced in Sunday's Washington Post, the full width of the newspaper page. It will be accompanied with a key to the scenes, which will easily enable the reader to follow the story in the picture.

Dupont Circle To Open for Traffic Today

Dupont Circle will be opened to local westbound traffic today at 9 a. m., District Director of Highways J. N. Robertson announced yesterday.

Robertson said vehicles will be permitted to enter from Massachusetts ave. to the east, swing around the circle to 19th st. on the southwest side and enter or leave the circle on any street between these points.

Only Connecticut ave. on the south side will remain closed today, Robertson said. This will be opened Sunday for the Easter Parade and then barred again for two or three days, he said.

Eastbound traffic will not be able to use the circle until Wednesday or Thursday, Robertson stated. A short section of roadway above the south end of the underpass has not been completed.

Detour signs will remain up until the underpass is completed, Robertson said, because surface lanes on Connecticut ave. cannot handle that roadway's normal traffic load. The underpass is expected to be completed April 25.

Blossoms 50% Out

National Park Service officials said all was well with the blossoms yesterday. They were "at least" 50 percent in bloom. And they should be full-blown for the weekend.

To accentuate their beauty after dark four 800-million-candlepower searchlights will play across the Tidal Basin each night until 11 p. m.

The committee, reporting a deluge of calls for accommodations yesterday, asked that persons with rooms to rent call its Transit Housing Bureau at RE. 2600.

Visitors from Natchez and Mobile, Memphis and St. Jo, proceeded to Washington to see the sights, trimmed with flowering cherry blossoms.

Virginian Reports Spotting Saucer In District Area

Another flying saucer was reported over the Washington area, yesterday, this by L. S. F. Meaker, 508 Madison pl., Falls Church.

Meaker said he spotted the circular, extremely shiny object about 3 p. m., as he stood in his front yard.

"I never believed any of these stories before," he said, "but now I do because I saw it. It was high, I would guess about 10,000 feet, and heading east. It went very, very fast. I could see it only for three or four seconds."

Meaker said he heard no motors and saw no vapor trail. He said he could not estimate the size of the object.

Hats Await Winners of Ave. Parade

Get out the old gray bonnet, put a new ribbon on it and drive old Lizzie over to the Easter parades Sunday. Next thing you know judges will be showering you with prizes—probably hats.

The principal spotlight will be on the Connecticut ave. promenade from 12:30 to 4:30 p. m. in the area from Lafayette park to Florida ave.

Judges, seated in Rolls-Royce, Jaguar, Bentley and American-made convertibles, will cruise the area concentrating on strollers in the vicinity of the Dupont Plaza and Mayflower hotels, Church of the Covenant and St. Matthews.

About 40 prizes with a total value of $1500 to $2000 will be awarded to winners in 15 categories, and orchid corsages flown from Hawaii by United Airlines will be distributed to judges and winners. The prizes range from a "capsule" self-improvement course to five spring bonnets.

Horace J. Meyers, president of the Connecticut Avenue Association, sponsors of the fashion hunt, announced the organization has selected an honorary Mayor—"someone in the public eye"—who will participate on the award broadcasts. The unidentified notable will receive a key to the avenue from Meyers.

Another place to make the new duds pay off is at Silver Spring where the Silver Spring Board of Trade will award cash prizes to the best dressed in four categories. Winners will be selected from Georgia ave. or Colesville rd. between Fenton st. and Georgia ave., between 1 and 2:30 p. m. Sunday.

Judges will tour the area—in convertibles, too—and an official photographer will snap the best-dressed paraders. Final selection, based on the photographs, will be announced in the evening at the Board of Trade office.

At Falls Church, the Easter program will feature a parade at 2 p. m. today, complete with an Army band, fashion floats, neighboring fire department apparatus, and veterans' groups. The line of march will be from South Washington st. and Cameron rd., Lee hwy., Broad st. and Cherry st. to the Falls Church High School on Hillwood ave.

Jefferson Village in Falls Church will be the scene, Sunday afternoon, of an egg hunt for 1000 children between the ages of two and 12. Some 1800 eggs have been painted, ready to be hidden and found.

Another parade will be held Sunday at 3:30 p. m. from 10th and U sts. nw. by the National Negro Opera Company to launch a drive for 100,000 members and a $250,000 fund for erection of a building and financing a season of opera.

In the line will be several bands, floats, service organizations and many of the opera singers. The parade will move along U st., 15th and Corcoran sts. nw. to the John Wesley A. M. E. Zion Methodist Church where a concert and speeches will be heard at 5 p. m.

Photos Taken 80 Miles Above Earth Shown

Mother Earth's curving surface was displayed photographically last night at Constitution Hall to a National Geographic Society lecture audience.

Clyde T. Holliday, who directed the Navy's project at the White Sands, (N. Mex.,) Proving Grounds, showed pictures taken from 80 miles up—heights attainable only by rockets.

Areas caught in a single picture took in up to 200,000 square miles, 20 times the area of Maryland, he explained.

Montgomery Hospital To Continue Fund Drive

The building fund drive of the Montgomery County General Hospital which has raised more than $95,000 will be continued, the board of directors announced yesterday.

The decision to continue the drive was made to assist in the retiring of a $55,000 mortgage and meeting a moderate deficit incurred during the construction period.

Safe With $15,240 Stolen

Syracuse, N. Y., April 7 (U.P.)—Robbers escaped today with a safe containing $15,240 in cash and checks. They bound and gagged a cleaning man at a sports center after it was closed for the night and carted off the 500-pound safe in a vehicle parked in back of the center.

the three-hour service beginning at noon. Loud speakers carried the service to 4000 outside. More than 1500 attended a similar service at nearby St. Thomas' Protestant Episcopal Church.

A message by Francis Cardinal Spellman, broadcast by the Voice of America, told the people of Russia and her satellites that "America's thoughts and America's heart are with you."

Bishop Sherill's Message

"In this hour when the heel of hating despots is upon your heads, when the terror of the noose and knout is heavy upon your hearts, your own heritage is not bankrupt if your spirit refuses to die, to hope for liberation and freedom," the cardinal said.

The Right Rev. Henry Knox Sherill, presiding bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States, said in a Holy Week message that Christians should find in Christ's death the "redeeming and conquering love of God which brings the gift of hope."

Remembering the "heroism and self-sacrifice of Calvary," he said, Christians "will view our distraught and fearful world with open eyes, and in consecration to the will of God, strive to do something about it."

On this Good Friday, for the first time in years, an armed peace reigned in the Holy Land. In Jerusalem, pilgrims filed past ugly scars of war in their annual march to the sacred Via Dolorosa and past the 14 "Stations of the Cross."

Elsewhere, occasional violence marked Easter's approach.

In the Philippines, four dismissed policemen assassinated two former colleagues and wounded seven village policemen during a pasaba—a Holy Week relating to the passion play.

In Belfast, Northern Ireland, special security police seized 10 men in a series of pre-Easter raids on homes. The raids were described as precautions against Irish Republican demonstrations commemorating the Easter Rebellion of 1916.

Thousands Attend Good Friday Rites

Washingtonians yesterday took time out from their work to attend solemn three-hour Good Friday rites.

Crowds of worshipers filled the churches to hear again of the passion and crucifixion of Christ at Calvary on the first Good Friday.

At both St. Patrick's and St. Matthew's Roman Catholic churches, worshipers unable to find seats stood in the aisles throughout the service.

Epiphany Episcopal church, 1317 G st. nw., estimated that 10,000 persons attended the three-hour service at which the Rev. Leland Stark and the Rev. Warren Mace alternated in giving meditations on the seven last words of Christ.

In Franklin Park, more than 100 persons gathered in the bright sunlight to participate in Stations of the Cross conducted by seminarians from St. Paul's College. Another outdoor service was held on the steps of First Congregational Church, 10th and G sts. nw., where the Rev. Carl Heath Kopf preached to a crowd of noonday shoppers.

At Catholic services, priests wore black vestments as a mark of sorrow on the anniversary of the crucifixion, there were no candles burning and the altar was covered with a single linen cloth.

Lent officially ends at noon today, Holy Saturday. In Catholic and some Episcopal churches ceremonies will begin early in the day with the blessing of the new fire and the Paschal Candle. White vestments will be worn at the mass and flowers and candles be placed upon the altar.

Statues, veiled since Passion Sunday, will be unveiled and church bells, which have been silent since Holy Thursday, will ring out again.

Laurel Bettor Seized With Phony Ticket

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Laurel, Md., April 7.—A man who is believed to have cashed a counterfeit mutuel ticket here yesterday was taken into custody today by John Madala, of the track police department, shortly after the first race.

The man gave his name as Boscom G. Swinney of San Mateo, Calif., and track officials turned him over to Lieut. Wilbur Wade of the Anne Arundel County police department.

He was arrested by Madala while trying to cash a doctored $10 ticket on Lost Ray, the $46.60 winner of today's first race. Success in the attempt would have netted him a $230.30 payoff.

Swinney is alleged to have cashed a phony $10 ticket on Midiante, a $21.20 shot yesterday, the redeemed ticket calling for a payoff of $106.

Ticket Doctored With Razor

Cashiers were alerted before today's program and when Swinney appeared at a window, the clerk flashed his "warning" light and the Californian was taken into custody.

The two counterfeit tickets, now being held as evidence by the track police, present a new twist in the changing of mutuel tickets. While the eradicating of numbers and printing of new ones has been the system used by counterfeiters in the past, this man used a razor to superimpose the winning number off a ticket from a previous race.

"I heard of a similar case of counterfeiting at Santa Anita Park last winter," Madala said. "When we took Swinney into custody, he said that he is from California, but came here from Oaklawn Park. Whether or not he pulled his ticket changing at that track is not known as yet, but, of course, we will notify the Oaklawn Park officials."

If the ticket "doctor" had waited until the fourth race he could have made a bid at a $174.20 mutuel. That was the pay-off on a $2 ticket on Mrs. C. O. Schweitzer's Ribard. The son of Swing and Sway, with Apprentice Joe Servis, just refused to give up and took a photo decision from F. Santill's Margaret E. Third money went to the Wild Goose Farm's Jolly Gremlin.

The day's feature, the Cherry Blossom, went to J. J. Hogan's Comely Belle, a $5 favorite in a field of six. Apprentice Jim McDermott brought the filly from last position to win with ease. D. Ginsburg's Last Curtain was second with R. E. Vogelman, jr.'s Bad Light third. The winner went the mile and a furlong in 1:52 1/5.

A total of $8,742,581 was bet for the 12-day meeting, an average of $728,548 daily. Last fall Laurel averaged $617,618. In 1949, Bowie's opening session drew an average of $825,732, the best of that year in the State.

W-L Heads Relays Field

Runner-up twice previously, Washington-Lee of Arlington is conceded a good chance to take the third annual Invitational Alexandria Memorial Relays this afternoon at 1:30 in George Washington Stadium.

W.-L. has already captured the Virginia State indoor crown as well as the University of North Carolina indoor championship.

The eight relay and five field events will attract nearly 500 entrants from 21 secondary schools, including the defending champs, Durham (N.C.) High, and eight interhigh teams. In 1949, 14 schools sent 279 boys to the meet. Anacostia, with 47 entered, will have the biggest squad.

Rifle Tourney Here Today

Art Cook, Olympic champ from Washington, and Miss Betty Balinger of Arlington open defense of their titles in the United States Gallery Rifle championships today at University of Maryland.

A field of 134 shooters from New York to Florida and as far West as Minnesota will begin the tournament at 8 o'clock this morning and continue until next Saturday.

Virginia champions, Walter Philbrick of Portsmouth and Mrs. Suzannae Johnson of Newport News are also entered.

Stephens, Wife Win In Badminton Play

Baltimore, April 7 (AP).—Clin and Patsey Stephens, Baltimore's husband and wife badminton stars, today advanced to the semifinals in their respective divisions of the tenth annual National Badminton Championships here.

Clint eliminated Dick Mitchell of San Diego, 12—15, 17—14, 14—7; while his wife defeated Marianna Gott of Los Angeles, 11—4, 5—11, 11—0.

Hill Prince 4-1 for Derby

St. Louis, April 7 (AP).—Betting commissioner James Carroll today named Oil Capitol as the 3 to 1 favorite to win the Kentucky Derby.

Carroll rated Hill Prince second at 4 to 1, Your Host at 5 to 1, Middleground at 6 to 1 and Guillotine and Theory at 8 to 1.

Over Giants, 16-12

Gordon Hits 2 Homers as Tribe Wins

Shreveport, La., April 7 (AP).—Second Baseman Joe Gordon hit two home runs today as the Cleveland Indians beat the New York Giants, 16-12, in a wild ball ame.

The Tribe offense, which had produced nothing better than a single in 30 innings, let loose today. Catcher Ray Murray also homered, Bob Kennedy had two doubles and Luke Easter knocked in three runs in the club's 13-hit barrage.

Bob Feller, who gave up 14 hits in six innings Sunday, allowed five runs on six hits in his six innings on the mound today.

Macon, Ga., April 7 (AP).—Boston's Red Sox exploded a pair of five-run innings today behind the four-hit shutout pitching of Joe Dobson for an 11-0 victory over the Macon Peaches, defending champions of the Class A Sally League.

Ted Williams poled a 409-foot three-run homer over the center-field barrier in the second inning when the Sox scored five times for a 6-0 lead. The major leaguers added their other five runs in the ninth.

The House delegation, including his wife and parents, came 102 miles from Bessemer, Ala., to see him wallop a 381-foot homer and add a run-producing single in three times at bat.

Although Joe DiMaggio insisted his leg was all right and denied a report that he had undergone an X-ray examination, the Clipper still felt inclined to rest the pulled muscle he suffered in his left calf last Wednesday and did not play today.

Nats Pitch Joe Haynes Against A's

By a Post Reporter

Orlando, Fla., April 7.—The Nats are hoping to learn something to their advantage tomorrow when they take on the Athletics at Tinker Field. That's when Joe Haynes goes to the pitching mound again.

The big right-hander, who was virtually useless to the team last season with his convalescent pitching shoulder, drummed up some eager hopes last week with five inning of shutout pitching against Minneapolis.

He wasn't beating much on that day, but Haynes was smiling happily when he left the mound. "My arm never felt better," he declared. "Maybe this is where I start winning again."

Manager Bucky Harris, well aware of his pitching plight, will be rooting loudly for Haynes to do well against the A's. "What a help he'd be if he can work regularly for us and win," said Harris.

There's a special respect for Haynes in the Washington camp if his shoulder is sound. "I don't care if he doesn't show us a fast ball," says Harris. "He never did have much of a hard one. But he has that wonderful control, and he knows how to pitch, and he can get by nicely if that shoulder doesn't bother him."

Outfielder Gil Coan's role with the Nats at least in the immediate future will confine him to the bench whenever the club is up against left-handed pitching, Harris said today.

"I'm not going to let Coan look at a left-handed pitch for a while," said Harris. "That would be giving him the worst of it. I want him in there fattening his average against right handers. And then if he comes up with the self-confidence he needs, I'll play him against all kinds of pitching."

Mrs. Ely Wins Army-Navy Event

Mrs. William J. Ely, with a 93-9, 84 yesterday won Army Navy Country Club's first blind bogey tournament of the season. Her low handicap beat out Mrs. J. A. de Vos' 96-12, 84 and Mrs. G. L. Permont's 99-15, 84.

In the 9-hole flight, Mrs. W. P. Ennis took top honors with a 58-18, 40. Mrs. D. L. Crow was second with 66-20, 46.

Army Medical Wins MDW Volleyball Title

Army Medical Center won the Military District of Washington volleyball championship for the third straight year by defeating Fort Belvoir in two matches, 15-8, 15-13, and 15-13, 19-17, at Walter Reed Hospital last night.

Dizzy Really Used His Head in Series

By Red Smith

New York, April 7 (NYHT).—There was this rookie, Moe Berg said, who came from Covington, Ky. In Philadelphia he and Moe took a walk. They walked for three hours, "up and down all those tree streets," Moe said—Chestnut, Walnut, Locust, Spruce.

Red Smith

"I keep looking around," the kid said at last. "Ain't seen a soul from Covington."

A sportswriter, like a deep-sea diver, works under constant, unrelenting pressure.

The prodding demands of his job keep him sitting in Mr. Toots Shor's atelier listening to stories like that and scraping up crumbs of wisdom from the wise crumbums who frequent Mr. Shor's literary evenings and—

"Never mind them humpty-dumpties," Mr. Dizzy Dean told Mr. Shor, who had a baseball record book out to settle an argument and was gazing, misty-eyed, at the figures for 1937, which was the last year his adored Giants won a pennant.

"Forget them humpty-dumpties," Mr. Dean said, "and turn back to a season when professionals was playing. Look at 1934, for instance."

"Yah," Mr. Shor jeered, thumbing the box scores of that World Series when Dizzy and Paul Dean won all four of the Cardinals' victories over Detroit, "and look who you beat. Skinny little Tommy Bridges, who wasn't big enough to beat an egg, and poor old Elden Auker. Why even Durocher got two hits offa him and one was a triple, which shows the kind of competition you had. Professionals? Why, you crumbum!"

"In that series," somebody said to Mr. Dean, "when you put yourself in as a pinchrunner while Frisch's back was turned, and then get yourself hit on the head, did it hurt?"

"Just got me sharp," Mr. Dean said. "They took me to the hospital for an X-ray and the next day the headlines in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat say 'picture of Dean's head shows nothing'."

"In the 1938 series," somebody else said, "when you were with the Cubs and Frank Crosetti beat you with that home run, you followed him around the bases hollering at him. What did you say?"

"I told him," Mr. Dean said, "'You couldn't have hit that ball against me two years ago, you little punk,' and Crosetti said, 'you ain't kiddin', Diz.'"

On this job, the grind goes just on and on like that hour after hour.

Ben Has 4 Under 68 For 141, Trails by 4 Strokes; Demaret 3d

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Augusta, Ga., April 7.—Jim Ferrier, who emigrated from Australia 10 years ago with an amateur status, developed a hot putter late this afternoon and bolted into a four-stroke lead at the halfway mark in the Masters Tournament.

Ben Hogan

Ferrier flung a sizzling 67 at the tournament field today and sprang out of yesterday's five-day tie for second place to post a 137 total and defeat litle Ben Hogan's bid to set the pace.

Hogan toured the first nine holes in 32, but he couldn't shake Ferrier, who turned in a 33 for that distance, a duplicate of his out going nine on the first day. Hogan came back to even par for a four-under 68, but Ferrier, with his own 67, wasn't yielding.

The tall, 35-qear-old sandy-haired immigrant, famed for his mastery on the greens—he wrote the chapter on putting in "the golf clinic," the game's top textbook—demonstrated his skill convincingly today.

For the 18 holes, he required only 20 putts, despite a three-putt lapse on the fourteenth. He put on a chipping show as well, and at the seventeenth he shot himself out of trouble smartly to get his par four after his hooked drive and second shots found traps.

Until Ferrier came along late in the afternoon, the day belonged to Hogan with his impressive 68, and the gallery of 10,000 gravitated to the little Texan who is in the thick of a comeback after last year's auto accident injuries.

The veteran Jimmy Demaret, who like Ferrier was involved in yesterday's five-way tie for second with 70s, dropped a 50-foot putt on the seventeenth green today and kept himself nicely in the running with a round of 72 that netted him third place, a stroke behind Hogan.

Lawson Little, another of yesterday's 80-group held together nicely to score a 73 today and move into fourth place.

Skee Riegel, who hung out his pro shingle only two months ago after ten years as an amateur, and led the field on opening day with his 69, skidded to a 73 today when his putting touch deserted him. He dropped to a fifth-place tie at 144, with Herschel Spears, the Huntsville, Ala., towhead who is proving a surprise with a 70-74.

Snead Way Off Form

Sammy Snead, now in a three-way tie with Henry Picard and Byron Nelson at 145, found trouble on today's final nine after going out in a subpar 35. He posted three fives and even a six on the incoming nine for a 39. That made the duffers gasp. Snead was neither hitting the greens nor putting well.

Trouble piled up for George Fazio, Woodmont Club pro of Washington, D. C., as it did for Snead on the tricky final nine.

After a smart outgoing 34, which put him in the running, Fazio's putter fouled him up and he bogied four of the last five holes to finish with an ugly 40. It landed him in a tie for eleventh with Herman Keiser and Bob Hamilton at 147.

Lew Worsham, graduate of the Washington links, was struggling to recover from his 77 of yesterday, and making progress until he, too, hit the final nine. After an outgoing par 36, Worsham lost control of his game, was in frequent trouble, went over par on four holes, lost six strokes to par figures, and finished with a 42.

The absence of the high winds made the course a more likable place today for both the players and the gallery, and the scores were uniformly lower. But Johnny Palmer, one of the pretournament favorites, virtually put himself out of the running with a four-over 76, for a 148 total

The day's greatest comeback was staged by the veteran Gene Sarazen who unloosed a fiery two-under 70 under today's happier conditions, a ten-stroke improvement on his first round.

Today's greatest fall from grace was that of Horton Smith, who was only one stroke back of Riegel as the second round started. Smith took an horrendous 41 on today's final nine and soared to a 79.

Baksi KOs Reynolds in 7th

New York, April 7 (AP).—Big Joe Baksi launched another comeback campaign in high gear tonight by stopping Bernie Reynolds in two minutes, seven seconds of the seventh round of the 10-round feature bout at St. Nicholas Arena.

Baksi of Kulpmont, Pa., outweighed his Fairfield, Conn., rival, 217 to 186.

Baksi, a 5-to-8 favorite, floored Reynolds seven times in the bruising battle.

The 28-year-old Baksi, hoping to come back into the big time, dropped Reynolds for no-count in the first, for two in the second, for six, nine and no count in the sixth, and for seven and no count in the seventh.

Referee Ruby Goldstein halted the bout as soon as Reynolds hit the deck for the second time in the seventh.

Chesapeake Trial Opens 16-Day Meet

Havre de Grace begins its 16-day meeting at 1:45 p. m. today with the $7500 added Chesapeake Trial topping the eight-race program.

The 3-year-old test—a prep for next Saturday's $20,000 Chesapeake Stakes—has drawn 11 contestants, including Dion K. Kerr, jr.'s Fleet Argo, winner of the Laurel stakes last week.

The lineup also includes: Palatine Stable's Quiz Show, Walter M. Jeffords' Suleiman, Janet Kelly's Gigolo, W. Taylor Leatherbury's Eastern Flyway, B. W. Delany's Major Hugh, Greentree Stable's Androcles, Robert M. Wood's High Frequency, H. B. Cohen's Jess Linthicum, Bobanet Stable's Mystagogue and William G. Helis' Pebble Song.

This spring session will be the only meeting held this year at this Harford County track, since the other nine days of the 25-day allotment will be run off at Pimlico.

Maj. Gen. Milton A. Record, president of Havre de Grace, made the decision to switch a portion of his meeting to Pimlico in order to avoid competition with Garden State Park, located just outside Philadelphia.

Today's patrons are expected to have considerable troubue determining on their favorite in the trial since all of the sophomore runners have shown considerable promise.

Quiz Show, winner of the Eastern Shore here as a 2-year-old, will also be heavily played, despite the fact he was third in his only start this year. That effort, in Florida, was deemed a tightener by most horsemen.

'I Was Meant to Be a Preacher,' Says Armstrong, Now Fighting for the Lord

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

HENRY ARMSTRONG, only boxer ever to hold three championships simultaneously, is fighting for the Lord these days, and he's not a bit surprised. "I was meant to be a preacher," he says.

His ring career five years behind him, the 38-year-old Armstrong will be on the pulpit Sunday at Uline Arena to give an Easter sermon, highlighting the "Gospel Cavalcade" program. It's his tenth stop on a Nation-wide preaching tour.

"I've had divine visions and dreams since I was a little boy," said Armstrong yesterday. "And when my 10 brothers and sisters used to kid me about them, my mother, a very religious person, would tell them I would grow up to be a preacher.

"When I became a fighter, my sister-in-law told me I was only preparing myself for the pulpit, that the people who were coming out to see me fight, would later come out to listen to me preach. She was right. I even married a minister's daughter.

"MY SISTER-IN-LAW is an amazing person—she is very religious and she can fortell the future with amazing accuracy. She told me ahead of time if I was going to win.

"Before my fight with Barney Ross in 1938 for the welterweight title, I was very worried. I already held the featherweight and lightweight titles and the newspapers said I had bitten off more than I could chew. They made me a 3-1 underdog.

"But Emma Lou told me, 'don't worry. This will be your easiest fight. Before it's over, the referee will ask you to have mercy on Ross and let him last the whole fight. Ross will go to the hospital and you will come out unscratched. And that's exactly what happened.'"

Armstrong said he turned to preaching eight months ago when a friend asked him to preach at a benefit to help pay up a church. It netted $3000, and since then, Henry has been in great demand.

He goes to Detroit next week, and then back to the West Coast for more engagements.

Sprinters Featured at W. Virginia

Charles Town, W. Va., April 7.—Sprinters will hold the spotlight in the feature debut purse as the Charles Town Jockey Club opens its second 1950 meeting tomorrow.

The chief event on the card, the first of 18 days of racing at this point, drew a limit field of eight, plus four reserves for a dash of six and a half furlongs.

Kenneth Wheeler's Bullhead, successful both here and at Sunshine Park this year, and E. L. Morsberger's Minaddie, winner over this track and prominent in a race at Laurel, will vie for favoritism. Thanks to the apprentice allowance Bullhead gets in with 108 pounds to 114 for his rival.

The entry of Mrs. G. A. Saportas, jr.'s High Heart and J. N. Barnes' Fetch It is formidable in this company. High Heart, a son of Grand Slam, has worked well and gets in with 111 pounds.

Charles Town, which opened the 1950 season in this area with a successful March meeting, expects to do as well at this session. The Baltimore & Ohio race special, a coal strike casualty for part of the first meeting, will be available, bringing fans from Washington, Silver Spring and Rockville. Post time for the first race will be 1:30 p. m. with the daily double on the first and second races closing at 1:15 p. m.—HAIGHT.

Bill Bennings Says:

At Laurel.

Dear Folks:

Havre de Grace and Charles Town lock horns starting with the Saturday program. Too bad they have to conflict. The West Virginia track probably will nick The Graw upward of $75,000 daily in betting. Charles Town probably will be off about $30,000. Charles Town picked the Graw to buck rather than get caught against a flat track by day plus a trotting plant by night. Fortunately there will be no horse problems at either course, the Charles Town horses who performed well at Laurel probably will go back to the mountain country, while the Graw will depend on new talent.

By the way, a Charles Town boy carried off the jockey honors here. Willie Downs, who was a star during the March meeting, retained his form here.—Bill.

Terp Golfers Win Again, 8-1

Maryland's golf team, undefeated in three years on its home course, defeated Richmond, 8-1, yesterday at the Prince Georges Golf and Country Club.

Terrapins Reid Phippeny and Frank Butterfield post a pair of 80s for low medalists honors. Maryland has won twice and lost once.

Butterfield (M) defeated Hall, 3 and 2; Alspaw (M) defeated Ferguson, 7 and 6. Best ball—Maryland, 3 and 2.

New York Is Location For Danziger Movies

By Mark Barron

NEW YORK (AP).—Two Broadway film technicians who once were devoted to sound effects and out-of-the-ordinary film shots for Hollywood have now decided they have been overlooking a gold mine in the sidewalks of New York.

Edward J. and Harry Lee Danziger have just completed the full-length films, "Jigsaw" and "So Young, So Bad," which United Artists will release soon. Both films were made almost entirely in Manhattan streets or apartments and in Wall Street offices which they borrowed for a few hours from priends and relatives.

The Danziger technicians have been operating from their Eastern sound studios on Manhattan a unit which, for several years, has been producing location shooting, process shots and sound dubbing for scenes to be used in Hollywood productions.

Then, observing the way that Hollywood producers were coming to New York and the corners of Europe to produce complete pictures on actual locations, they decided to go all out themselves. They had been filming parts of pictures in New York for years, so they decided to produce full-length films.

Besides operating their technical studios, the Danzigers have a varied background for this production of films in natural settings. Harry was a musical technician on Broadway shows at the age of 16, and later he assisted Fabian Sevitsky with the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra. Ed was a lawyer for five years and then, just before World War II, they operated the Luna Park Amusement Center at Coney Island.

In "Jigsaw," which stars Franchot Tone, they filmed the entire picture outside of studios. To do this they used 60 locations around New York, some in the International Telephone & Telegraph Building, some in Wall Street and some in borrowed apartments. For the final sequence they borrowed the Brooklyn Museum. Their technical training assisted them materially in shooting this picture.

Mechanical Canaries Used

"In one scene Franchot Tone goes into a pet shop where there are canaries on display," Edward Danziger said. "We rented a pet shop in Manhattan which was fliled with canaries. But the natural singing of live canaries drowned out the human voices. So we had to get Tone to speak the lines again and we used toy mechanical canaries for the bird sounds. We dubbed that in on the sound track and it sounded perfect. The voices of the mechanical birds remained in the background, they not being the big 'hams' that the live birds proved to be."

As they attempt to use mostly actors from Broadway plays for a few days of shooting, or Hollywood actors who are spending only a brief time on Manhattan, the Danzigers are discovering some "new faces" for films.

In "So Young, So Bad," a story by Jean Rouveral and Bernard Vorhaus, they found four teen-age girls playing in Broadway shows who spent their hours between stage performances making this film about a group of teen-agers sent up to a home for delinquents. Paul Hanreid, who plays the leading hole of a psychiatrist, found himself faced with Anne Francis, Anne Jackson, Enid Pulver and Rosita Moreno in the teen-age roles. As a result Miss Moreno has a Hollywood contract.

Places Are Familiar

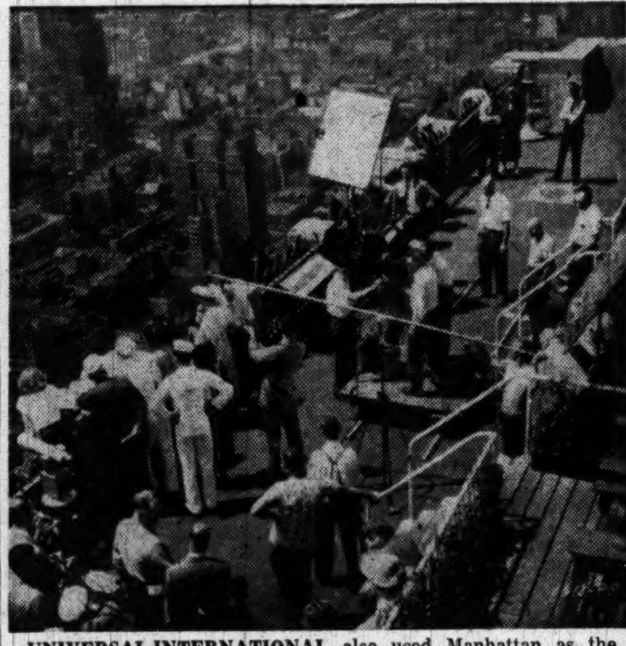
All scenes in the film were shot in and around New York, at such familiar places as Ruppert's Brewery, the Carousel in Central Park and in the laundry of the Vanderbilt Hotel.

"One problem we have in filming among Manhattan's natural settings," Harry Lee Danziger said, "is we have to do more cutting on real life scenes made in the East. Too many New Yorkers are enthusiastic 'sidewalk superintendents' who like to shoulder their way into scenes.

"Sometimes we stage phony noisy and theatrical shooting of scenes several blocks from the actual shooting to lure away the onlooking crowds. When they run to the phony 'shooting' then we can quietly do the actual shooting on the place they have deserted."

At the moment the Danzigers are filming "St. Benny, the Dip" on the streets of New York. With Dick Haymes, Beatrice Pearson and Roland Young playing the leading roles, this is the story of crooks who find that their best hideout from the police is in a church, and, for that, the Danzigers have borrowed a church.



UNIVERSAL-INTERNATIONAL also used Manhattan as the backdrop for a movie, "Ma and Pa Kettle Go to Town," starring Marjorie Main and Percy Kilbride. Here Miss Main (under microphone at end of boom), surrounded by extras appearing as tourists, rubbernecks from the roof of Rockefeller Center. The rest of the people in the scene are technicians

New York Is Location For Danziger Movies

By Mark Barron

NEW YORK (AP).—Two Broadway film technicians who once were devoted to sound effects and out-of-the-ordinary film shots for Hollywood have now decided they have been overlooking a gold mine in the sidewalks of New York.

Edward J. and Harry Lee Danziger have just completed the full-length films, "Jigsaw" and "So Young, So Bad," which United Artists will release soon. Both films were made almost entirely in Manhattan streets or apartments and in Wall Street offices which they borrowed for a few hours from priends and relatives.

The Danziger technicians have been operating from their Eastern sound studios on Manhattan a unit which, for several years, has been producing location shooting, process shots and sound dubbing for scenes to be used in Hollywood productions.

Then, observing the way that Hollywood producers were coming to New York and the corners of Europe to produce complete pictures on actual locations, they decided to go all out themselves. They had been filming parts of pictures in New York for years, so they decided to produce full-length films.

Besides operating their technical studios, the Danzigers have a varied background for this production of films in natural settings. Harry was a musical technician on Broadway shows at the age of 16, and later he assisted Fabian Sevitsky with the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra. Ed was a lawyer for five years and then, just before World War II, they operated the Luna Park Amusement Center at Coney Island.

In "Jigsaw," which stars Franchot Tone, they filmed the entire picture outside of studios. To do this they used 60 locations around New York, some in the International Telephone & Telegraph Building, some in Wall Street and some in borrowed apartments. For the final sequence they borrowed the Brooklyn Museum. Their technical training assisted them materially in shooting this picture.

Mechanical Canaries Used

"In one scene Franchot Tone goes into a pet shop where there are canaries on display," Edward Danziger said. "We rented a pet shop in Manhattan which was flited with canaries. But the natural singing of live canaries drowned out the human voices. So we had to get Tone to speak the lines again and we used toy mechanical canaries for the bird sounds. We dubbed that in on the sound track and it sounded perfect. The voices of the mechanical birds remained in the background, they not being the big 'hams' that the live birds proved to be."

As they attempt to use mostly actors from Broadway plays for a few days of shooting, or Hollywood actors who are spending only a brief time on Manhattan, the Danzigers are discovering some "new faces" for films.

In "So Young, So Bad," a story by Jean Rouveral and Bernard Vorhaus, they found four teen-age girls playing in Broadway shows who spent their hours between stage performances making this film about a group of teen-agers sent up to a home for delinquents. Paul Hanreid, who plays the leading hole of a psychiatrist, found himself faced with Anne Francis, Anne Jackson, Enid Pulver and Rosita Moreno in the teen-age roles. As a result Miss Moreno has a Hollywood contract.

Places Are Familiar

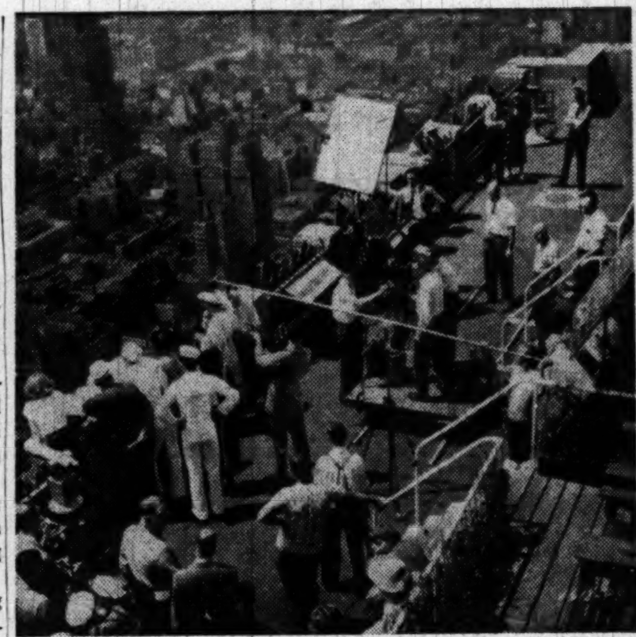
All scenes in the film were shot in and around New York, at such familiar places as Ruppert's Brewery, the Carousel in Central Park and in the laundry of the Vanderbilt Hotel.

"One problem we have in filming among Manhattan's natural settings," Harry Lee Danziger said, "is we have to do more cutting on real life scenes made in the East. Too many New Yorkers are enthusiastic 'sidewalk superintendents' who like to shoulder their way into scenes.

"Sometimes we stage phony noisy and theatrical shooting of scenes several blocks from the actual shooting to lure away the onlooking crowds. When they run to the phony 'shooting' then we can quietly do the actual shooting on the place they have deserted."

At the moment the Danzigers are filming "St. Benny, the Dip" on the streets of New York. With Dick Haymes, Beatrice Pearson and Roland Young playing the leading roles, this is the story of crooks who find that their best hideout from the police is in a church, and, for that, the Danzigers have borrowed a church.



UNIVERSAL-INTERNATIONAL also used Manhattan as the backdrop for a movie, "Ma and Pa Kettle Go to Town," starring Marjorie Main and Percy Kilbride. Here Miss Main (under microphone at end of boom), surrounded by extras appearing as tourists, rubbernecks from the roof of Rockefeller Center. The rest of the people in the scene are technicians

Baltimore Crash Kills Arlington Motorist

News Correspondent For London Paper Near Death Here From Auto Collision

An Arlington man was killed yesterday in a Baltimore traffic accident and a Washington news correspondent was near death following another auto accident here.

Mr. Hamilton

Harvey E. Hamilton, jr., 35, of 843 S. Glebe rd., Arlington, was killed when, police said, his auto struck a concrete harbor bulkhead at 70 miles per hour early yesterday. They said he apparently thought he was on a through highway instead of a dead end street. His auto, police said, was broken in half by the impact.

For the past several months Hamilton has been an Arlington County plumbing and gas inspector.

A native of Hendersonville, N. C., he has lived in Greater Washington for about 10 years.

He served more than two years in the Army, part of the time in Germany.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Dorothy Baldwin Hamilton; a son, Robert Baldwin Hamilton, 11; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey E. Hamilton, sr. of Hendersonville; a brother, Evans Hamilton of Hendersonville; three sisters, Mrs. Elizabeth Ross of Brownsville, Tex., Mrs. Laura Osteen of Hendersonville, and Mrs. Alice Wilson of Tyron, N. C.

Funeral services will be held at 10 a. m. Monday at Arlington Methodist Church, S. 8th st. and Glebe rd., Arlington. Burial will be at Arlington National Cemetery.

The critically injured news correspondent is Miss Nora Beloff, 30, of the London Observer. She was reported near death as the result of a collision between her auto and a taxicab.

The accident occurred at 2:45 p. m. at 21st and C sts. nw. She was taken to Emergency Hospital where it was said she suffered acute head injuries.

Driver of the taxicab, police said, was Charles H. Menzer, 34, of RFD 2, Alexandria. He also was taken to Emergency Hospital, treated for bruises on the chest and knees.

Miss Beloff, who lives at 1235 31st st. nw., comes from a distinguished British family. Her sister, a biochemist, is the wife of Dr. Ernest B. Chain of the Oxford University faculty, one of the discoverers of penicillin and a Nobel prize winner in 1945 in physiology and medicine. A brother, Max Beloff, is on the Oxford faculty.

She was graduated from Lady Margaret Hall, Oxford, in 1940, with honors in history and served during the war in a confidential Government post dealing with French affairs. After the war, she was in the press office of the British Embassy in Paris for a time. Later, she was with Reuters' news agency and then became Paris correspondent for the Observer. She came to Washington in January, 1949, for the London Observer.

JIMMIED—A broken lock on a cigarette compartment in the tearoom cashier's cage in Lansburgh department store was one of the few leads picked up by more than a hundred investigators at work on watchmen murders. Two packs of cigarettes were missing

Fingerprints on Watchman's Shoe Provide Slaying Lead

this case. At midnight last night, many of them had been on the job continuously for 22 hours, taking only time off to grab a quick bite of food.

They had many questions to unravel. What was the motive? Robbery? Vengeance against one of the watchmen by a store employe?

Were the deep, savage wounds the work of a hate-crazed killer or a thief overdosed with narcotics?

Who left open a mezzanine window—one of the most likely means of entrance to the store?

Was the killer (or killers) familiar with the interior of the store and the routine followed by the night watchmen?

Cleaning Places Alerted

As police sought the answers to these questions and took such routine steps as alerting all cleaning establishments to be on the lookout for blood-stained garments, last-minute Easter shoppers filled the store, most of them seemingly unaware that 12 hours earlier two men had died violent deaths there.

It was a curious blend of stark tragedy and holiday spirit.

The double killing was first uncovered at 1:15 a. m. by William E. Griffith, of 2027 Branch ave. se., a metal worker who had been repairing a main door with a fellow worker, Anthony Marisi, of 3044 Pennsylvania ave. se.

Griffith had completed his work and had gone to the men's room on the first floor to clean up. When he pushed open the door leading to the entryway to the lavatory, he found Carpenter on his back, dead of stab wounds.

Rushed to Report Slaying

Griffith summoned Marisi who remained beside the body while Griffith drove his car to the First Precinct and reported his discovery.

When Griffith returned with Corp. John S. Hughes and Pvts. R. J. Glover and A. G. Fielder, all of the First Precinct, they found the beat patrolman, Pvt. Robert Seibert of the First Precinct, investigating an unlocked and unguarded store door on the E st. side of the building.

The key was on the inside of the door. Police believe it was through this door the killer or killers escaped. It is customary, police were told, for the watchmen on duty to leave the inside key in the lock.

Carpenter was stretched in a welter of blood. He had been stabbed three times in the chest and once in the back and there were two cuts on his right hand, indicating he had tried to fend off the knife thrusts.

Feet Bound, Hands Free

His feet and legs were securely bound with sash-cord but his hands were free. A handkerchief had been stuffed in his mouth and a cloth had been passed around his mouth and tied behind his head.

Police theorized the killer, or killers, started to tie up Carpenter, but midway, fearing he might recognize them, stabbed him to death. Or that after binding all but Carpenter's hands, his struggles became so fierce that the slayer, or slayers, viciously ended them with quick thrusts of the pointed, sharp blade.

The murder weapon was found just outside the men's room door, not far from Carpenter's broken glasses and wallet. The butcher's boning knife, it later developed, had been taken from the tea room kitchen on the mezzanine.

Within 30 minutes of Griffith's grim discovery, Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police; Inspector Robert S. Bryant and Capt. Robert V. Murray, the chief and assistant chief of the detective bureau, and every available headquarters cruiser and man from the First Precinct were at the store.

A cordon was thrown around the building and a systematic search of the store's interior was begun. They found the body of Hess on the sixth floor, about 10 or 15 feet from the freight elevator in which he had been stabbed.

Stabbed Three Times

He had been stabbed three times in the back and twice in the chest. Hess apparently was taken by surprise.

"He couldn't have known what hit him," said Barrett.

Hess had no time to reach for the gun tucked in a holster and strapped to his body.

Bloodstains told the story. There was a pool of blood in the elevator. A trail of blood led from the sixth-floor threshold of the elevator, through a set of swinging doors and into office space. The body was lying near a fire Protection Cabinet (which looks much like a safe) in which records are stored.

Made 12:15 Registration

Hess had been making the rounds of the upper floors while Carpenter remained downstairs in the lobby. He had punched the watchman's clock on the second floor at 12:15 a. m. and this was registered in the central office of a local store protective agency.

His clock showed he punched in on the fifth floor at 12:40 a. m. He got in his elevator after that, went to the sixth floor, opened the door—and met death.

Were the murders the work of thieves? This seemed the likeliest theory to police. But store officials checked and found nothing stolen except two packs of cigarettes. And no money apparently was taken from the pockets of the butchered guards. There was still cash in Carpenter's wallet.

Possible Means of Entry

Police said there were three possible means of entry by the killer, or killers:

The third possibility merits strong consideration, for it was on the mezzanine floor that the murder weapon was obtained. It was on the mezzanine floor that the only known theft occurred.

A small showcase containing candy and cigarettes on the mezzanine was padlocked. The hasp had been ripped off but nothing more than the two packages of cigarettes was taken.

Pully Outside Window

The mezzanine floor is shaped somewhat like a horseshoe with one side of the "U" about 30 feet shorter than the other. Leading off the short side, in a stairway corridor, is a window. Outside the window is a pulley by which cans of trash and garbage are lowered to a small areaway.

This areaway faces on an alley leading to D st. It is blocked off from the alley by a fence and screen 12 feet high. If someone had negotiated this 12-foot barrier, he could have scrambled (or been pulled) up the pulley rope to the open mezzanine window.

An autopsy on the bodies of the victims showed they had been stabbed with fanatical force. Each stroke was buried up to the hilt or nearly so.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald and his deputy, Dr. Christopher J. Murphy, agreed both men had been killed with the same weapon.

Hess First to Die

This meant, police said, that Hess was killed first, for the knife was found near the first floor men's room where Carpenter was slain. The injuries were such, Dr. MacDonald said, that both men died within minutes.

The stab wounds inflicted on Carpenter and Hess penetrated both heart and lung.

Ironically, both watchmen were to have been off duty Thursday night. Because of the illness of another watchman, the schedule had been temporarily changed and Carpenter and Hess had been asked to work.

Police expressed some interest in the story told by Harold Menteir, a painter and roommate of Carpenter. Menteir said Carpenter once told him he feared he would be stabbed by a certain store employe.

"He told me," said Menteir, "that this man had trouble with some of the other watchmen and that he (Carpenter) had also had a quarrel with this man. He said he wouldn't be surprised some day if he were stabbed."

15 Job Applications

Publicity given the Good Friday murders brought the Lansburgh store 15 applications yesterday for jobs as watchmen Usually, store officials said, it is necessary to advertise to get qualified men.

The Lansburgh store murders were a reminder that this was the second occasion in two months that a downtown department store has been the scene of a crime.

One weekend in February, Joseph G. Albert, jr., 28, of Seattle, Wash., stayed in the Woodward & Lothrop store after closing.

He came out of his hiding place when the store had emptied and filled a suitcase with $2700 worth of jewelry. In trying to escape from the building, he trapped himself inside a barred window. He received a one to three year prison term Thursday.

Both murdered watchmen were well-known to Lansburgh store personnel and were popular with them.

Although Hess kept a room at the Massachusetts ave. address, his home was in Baltimore where his wife, Mrs. Willie Hess, is employed by a clothing manufacturer. He was last home on Wednesday, according to his wife and daughter, Mrs. Charlotte McDorman.

Hess was a temporary Federal Government guard during the war. He was attached to the Aqueduct Police of the Army Engineers here for two years. He left Government service in 1946.

Carpenter, a bachelor, was a guard for the Perpetual Building Association before going to Lansburgh's in May, 1945. His brother, William, lives at 491 H st. sw. A sister, Mrs. Vernon Padgett, lives in Forestville, Md.

3 Charged With Theft Of Bed Linens

Three Hecht Co. employes were held for the grand jury yesterday in Municipal Court under $1000 bond each on charges that they stole $160 in bed linen from the store's warehouse here.

The three were arrested after an audit showed that over the last year, about $21,000 in bedding was unaccounted for at the company, according to testimony given by Jack H. Marks, warehouse general manager.

The defendants are David Mason, 27, of 1839 13th st. nw., Prince Albert Blunt, 32, of 1116 21st st. ne., and Haywood North, 43, of 1919 12th st. nw.

Man Who Shot at Girl in Rink Draws 6 Months to 3 Years

A 20-year-old youth who claimed he never got a "break" out of life was sentenced yesterday to serve from six months to three years in prison for taking a potshot at his former fiancee.

He is Edward F. Schwenk, a telephone repairman. Sentence was imposed by Judge David A. Pine of District Court who recommended that the defendant be imprisoned in the Federal reformatory at Chillicothe, Ohio.

Schwenk was arrested on December 18 after, according to police, he fired a shot and missed Miss Muriel Rowley, 17, a high school student of 510 Jefferson st. nw. They had cancelled their engagement the month before and Schwenk had been given back his ring.

The shooting occurred at the Riverside skating rink where Schwenk observed Miss Rowley skating with other youths. He used a Frontier model .32 caliber pistol.

A jury convicted Schwenk of assault with a dangerous weapon and carrying a deadly weapon. Schwenk contended that he had been drinking, but the Government argued he was in a jealous rage.

Defense Attorney Myer Koonin commented that the defendant's youth had been unhappy since for a time he was cared for as a public charge and the only home he knew was a room "with four bare walls."

Judge Pine said he was reluctant to impose a prison term but must do so to protect the public from such crimes. He advised Schwenk to "forget the girl" and prove that he is entitled to parole.

Nine Offices, Shops Entered; $1100 Stolen

Firms Ransacked In Kresge Building; Thieves Use Jimmies

Police hunted yesterday for energetic and methodical burglars who broke into nine offices and shops in the Kresge bldg., 1105 G st. nw., early in the day.

The break-ins were discovered at 7:45 a. m. by John Grice, a janitor, when he came to work.

The shops and offices were entered by jimmying doors or breaking glass door or window panels. Jimmies were used inside some of the places.

Seven of the places entered were on the sixth floor. They were :

The ship, scheduled to leave at 10 a. m., is to arrive at Havana next Wednesday. The return trip is scheduled to start three days later, with one two-day stop at Nassau planned. Another reserve cruise on the Keller is scheduled for May 6 to 19 to Kingston, Jamaica.

Knife Wielder On Bus Escapes

A bus passenger who got angry yesterday when the driver declined to change a $20 bill, pulled out a pocket knife and in the ensuing fracas hit a woman passenger on the nose with the handle of the knife.

The Capital Transit Co. bus operator, Barton T. Scrivener, 2506 North Harrison st., Arlington, said the passenger got on board at New Jersey ave. and H st. nw. and tried to cut him with the knife. In the excitement over the woman's injury, the knife-wielder escaped.

The woman, Mary Britt, 35, of 1524 10th st. ne., was treated at Casualty Hospital for a slight cut on the nose and was released.

The fugitive was described as a Negro, about 35, 5 feet 8 inches, 150 pounds, with a small mustache, wearing a black topcoat and a brown felt hat.

Medical Center Plans Outlined By GSA Official

Proposed Fire-Wing, 7-Storied Hospital At Soldiers' Home Will Have 1000 Beds

The 1000-bed hospital, said W. E. Reynolds, commissioner of public buildings for General Services Administration, probably will be a five-wing, seven-storied structure on the land recently acquired from Soldiers Home.

Construction, he said, probably will be brick, with limestone trim.

Fewer Beds in Wards

Architects and hospital leaders have some pretty definite ideas, however, on special features, he said. These include plans to limit the bed capacity of wards to four, or perhaps six patients.

Also, he disclosed, single, private rooms will be smaller, but in much higher ratio to ward beds than in most other large institutions.

Wide corridors and doorways so patients in big-wheeled beds can be rolled directly to and from operating rooms without stretcher handlings, are also desirable, Reynolds said.

Central Operating Rooms

Nursing wings probably will be limited to 30 to 35 beds on each floor and operating rooms, perhaps 10 in number, will be centrally located, he added.

The Washington Medical Center, consolidating the services of Emergency, Garfield and Episcopal Hospitals, was authorized by Congress, with a cash planning appropriation of $2,200,000 and contract authorizations up to $19,500,000.

It was planned originally for the Naval Observatory grounds here, but Congress blocked that move by holding off a Navy request for $8,500,000 to move the observatory to Charlottesville, Va.

D. C. Gets 47 Acres

This week the Army, General Services Administration, Veterans' Administration and the Bureau of the Budget announced a redevelopment plan of Soldiers Home land.

The plan lops off the southern portion of the 460-acre refuge for retired enlisted men, giving the District 47 acres for its proposed medical center. VA was allotted 83 acres, of which 44 are for a proposed 500-bed veterans hospital, and 39 for the site of a building to accommodate all VA activities now handled in Washington.

Soldiers' Home, itself, situated to the north of the lost acres, will continue to function, though a bill is being prepared for Congress to authorize the Government to buy up the entire reservation, and provide other home facilities for the more than 1500 soldiers in other States.

County Center Opens Drive For $35,000

The Montgomery County Cooperative Agricultural Center, Inc., yesterday launched a drive to raise $35,000 for additional equipment for its 64-acre project at Gaithersburg.

Immediate goal in the center's five-year improvement program is the construction of an auditorium, swimming pool, bath house, band shell, play equipment, horse and poultry show facilities, and sheep, swine and cattle barns. It is hoped these can be completed before the county-wide fair to be held August 22 to 26.

Sterling Bowman of Gaithersburg is chairman of the fund drive. Contributions of $50 or more automatically provide membership in the cooperative.

It is also planned to spruce up the grounds by building a softball field, adding another entrance and more fireplaces, extending the electricity and water facilities and completing the opening of a 1-acre lake.

The center was built last year by hundreds of volunteer workers at a cost of approximately $35,000. The entire center with improvements is now valued at about $150,000.

New Assessing To Aid County By $1 Million

New assessments for Poolesville and Barnesville election districts and the town of Washington Grove in Montgomery County have added more than a million dollars to the county's assessable base.

Figures released yesterday by Supervisor of Assessments Wilton T. Allen showed assessments for Poolesville of $2,462,710, an increase of $619,120; Barnesville, $1,893,230, an increase of $373,070, and Washington Grove, $316,540, an increase of $85,680. The total increase is $1,077,870.

Based on the current tax rate of $1.90 per $100 valuation the increase would add approximately $31,000 to the county's tax revenue, Allen figured. The new assessments will go on the tax books for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Both 'Critical'

Couple Clings To Life After Shooting

A 34-year-old wife, with a bullet hole in her head, and a husband who shot himself after wounding her, clung stubbornly to life last night.

Foy

They are Claude O. Foy, 42, a Naval Gun Factory machinist, who is in Gallinger Hospital, and his wife Vivian, 34, in Casualty Hospital. Both are listed in critical condition.

The shooting took place Thursday night in the second-floor bathroom of their home at 1816 22d st. se. While being taken from the house, Foy told police Pvt. H. A. Dunn of the Eleventh Precinct, that his wife had threatened to leave him and take their children, Betty 17, and Robert, 13.

Guard Posted at Hospital

Foy was formally charged at the Eleventh Precinct Station yesterday with assault with a dangerous weapon, and a police guard was posted on him at the hospital.

Two notes, written by Foy, were found in his wallet on the dining-room table. Though police would not disclose full details of the notes, they said one declared, "If I can't have her, no one else will."

A member of the family told police that the couple who had been married nearly 20 years, had been having trouble through the past month, and that some argument took place before the shooting.

Son Called Police

Police said Foy fired three shots from a small pistol, which was later found in a pool of blood on the bathroom floor. One went completely through his wife's head, another lodged in the bathroom ceiling, police said, and the third entered Foy's head.

The boy, Robert, who was at work in a basement shop at home, heard the shots and ran upstairs to find his parents. He summoned police, and later became hysterical. The daughter was at a school sorority picnic.

The two children were being cared for yesterday in the home of a friend whose identity was not made public.

Arnold Line Fare Rise of 5 Cents Starts

The boost, given final approval Thursday by the Interstate Commerce Commission, will affect about half the bus line's 50,000 daily passengers.

The increase adds a nickel to the cash cost of trips between the District and zones 1 through 5, where fares are now 15 to 35 cents. It will also change the price of tokens from 8 for $1 to 6 for $1.

Riders between Washington and zone 6, which includes the towns of Fairfax and Oakton via Chain Bridge rd., will still pay the 40-cent rate.

Also untouched by the fare hike are riders between the District and the Pentagon, Navy Annex and Arlington Farms, who will continue paying the present 10-cent rate, or a combined Arnold-Capital Transit fare of 16 cents.

Unaffected at present are passengers who ride the line within Virginia boundaries. However, a hearing on a smiliar 5-cent cash fare increase requested by the company is scheduled to be held Monday in Richmond, by the State Corporation Commission.

Zone 3, including Falls Church and the subdivisions of Jefferson Village, Fenwick Park, Tyler Park and Tremont Gardens—30 cents cash, or one token plus 10 cents.

Zone 4, including Vienna and Tysons Corner—35 cents cash, or one token plus 15 cents.

Zones 5 and 6, including the towns of Fairfax and Oakton by all routes—40 cents cash, or 1 token plus 20 cents.

Actor Huston Dies At Peak of Fame

WALTER HUSTON
Dies after birthday

Hollywood, April 7 (AP).—Walter Huston died of a heart attack today at the peak of a long and distinguished career.

The stage and screen actor was in thriving health until yesterday. He was stricken after friends gave him a luncheon for his sixty-sixth birthday. He regretted missing a birthday dinner last night at a cafe, so his pals shuttled between the party and his hotel suite.

Huston's physician, Dr. Verne Mason, said the actor rested well during the night, but was stricken by pain around 6 a. m. Death came two hours later.

His wife, former actress Nan Sunderland, was reported flying here from New York, where the Hustons kept an apartment. His son, John, writer and director, was given sedatives to calm his grief.

It was John who brought his father's highest honor. He wrote and directed "The Treasure of the Sierra Madre," which won Walter an Academy Award for the best supporting performance by an actor in 1948. In accepting the Oscar Walter remarked:

"I always told John that when he grew up and became a famous writer and director, he should find a good part for his old man. And he did."

John won writing and directing Oscars in the same film.

Huston's career ended at its peak. His movie salary was $7500 a week, and he had more offers than he could take. He finished "The Furies" last Christmas and was slated to start next week in "Old 880," in which he was to play a light-hearted counterfeiter.

Huston was born in Toronto, Canada, April 6, 1884, to Scotch and Irish parents.

In 1909, he gave up a promising job with a St. Louis power company to return to the footlights. He formed a vaudeville act with Bayone Whipple, whom he married in 1915. They were divorced in 1931 and she died in 1937. His first wife, now dead, was Rhea Gore by whom his son John was born in 1907.

In 1931, Huston married Nan Sunderland, with whom he starred in the stage version of "Dodsworth."

1500 See Ceremony

Jesus' Burial Reenacted At Monastery

By Richard Morris

A solemn ceremony commemorating the burial of Jesus Christ was performed in only two shrines in Christendom yesterday—one in Jerusalem, the other in Northeast Washington.

In the holy confines of the Franciscan Monastery at 1400 Quincy st. nw., a procession of 60 priests, brothers and students of the Order of Saint Francis formed before 1500 persons in the Memorial Church of the Holy Land.

They walked in pairs to the balcony altar of Mount Calvary, high above the cross-shaped nave of the chapel, before the gaze of worshippers who crowded every corner, stairway and vantage point of the shrine.

March to Foot of Cross

The Rev. Linus Capiello, O. F. M. led the procession of brown-robed monks, rosaries trailing from white cinctures about the waist, to the foot of the cross. There lay the bloodstained image of the Savior in wax, its members pierced by the spears of Roman soldiers.

Preceding the column of God's soldiers as they wound through the four sections of the chapel was a black cross, draped with a maniple representing the linen loin cloth from His figure.

There followed two candlebearers and a censerbearer. Then two monks with spears, one thrust into the infamous sponge soaked with vinegar and gall in scornful reply to the plea, "I thirst!"

Crown of Thorns on Pillow

Next came a purple pillow of silk, (the color symbolizing sorrow) on which rested the crown of thorns. Another pillow bore three iron nails which we would call spikes.

At the pink onyx "anointing stone" in the corner of the church opposite the Calvary altar, the celebrant sprinkled the form of Christ with holy water.

The Rev. Alexander Wyse, O. F. M., superior of the Franciscan Historical Academy at Bethesda, preached a sermon on the crucifixion.

"Pride and ambition have blinded the hearts and souls of God's chosen people," he declared.

"Instead of receiving him with open arms, they nailed him to the cross."

Body Placed in Tomb

The Franciscan choir chanted, without accompaniment because of the sorrow of the occasion, the "Popule Meus" from the Good Friday mass of the presanctified.

Members of the Franciscan Commissariat of the Holy Land, whose lives are devoted to preserving the Christian shrines of Palestine, placed the body of Christ in the tomb and closed the heavy door.

The investigators could determine no reason fo rhis act. They said he owned a home at Piney Point, Md., where he lived happily with his wife, Martha Anna, and his daughter, Ernestine Paula, 12 years old. He also is survived by a sister, Mrs. Florence Breece, of Trenton, N. J.

Schatzan, an electronics expert, was holder of patents on several inventions, associates said. He received the Silver Star for gallantry aboard the USS Manila Bay, an escort carrier.

The ship was under plane and surface attack by Japanese, and Schatzan put the ship's communication and electric system back in working order so the vessel could maneuver. He also had a number of other decorations, and wore stars for 13 engagements in the Pacific.

U. S. Diplomacy Trails Industry In Reconverting to Cold War

By J. A. Livingston

HERE is a quotation. Try to guess its source: "That the whole subject of defense should be under debate at this moment . . . is not entirely an accident. There is at present a stronger undercurrent of anxiety about the precarious balance between peace and war—which is a truer description of what is usually called foreign affairs—than at any time since the early days of the Berlin airlift.

Livingston

"Whether or not this country has a defense policy is a matter that well deserves examination. But there is a prior question. Defense has to be planned in the context of foreign policy — that is, of war-and-peace policy. And it is really very difficult indeed to say whether this country has one that is coherent, and if so, what it is.

"Bits and pieces of foreign policy have been discussed and more or less accepted. But since the fading of the postwar hope that peace could be based upon the United Nations and the Big Three, the people have been given no general picture of the fundamental issues at stake in the world and the means at the country's disposal for dealing with them. This fact was never more apparent than in the election, during which both parties shirked the issue almost completely."

THAT COULD BE a quotation from any number of American newspapers or magazines. It could refer to United States foreign policy. But it doesn't. The paragraph comes from the London Economist and refers to Britain's indecision in the postwar world. Indeed, when you read British magazines and newspapers, you discover that the Conservatives take Foreign Minister Bevin to task much as the Republicans in the United States take Secretary of State Acheson apart—though usually in Britain the name-calling is a bit more decorous.

The Anglo-American parallel provides its own explanation. In both countries, economic reconversion and readjustment have proceeded apace since the war, though Britain, because of the loss of foreign investments, is still having a hard time. But international reconversion—diplomatic reconversion—still lags. In rehabilitating and reequipping industry, nations possessed an undamaged know-how. But in international affairs a new force has arisen, Soviet Russia, with a new technique. The old know-how doesn't do.

"Soviet diplomacy has introduced into foreign relations a principle absent since the French Revolution—the principle of aggressive state policy linked to a universal missionary idea," writes the Economist. "When Communists in France can play an integral part in the Communists' struggle to dominate Indo-China, nothing is unrelated. That is the essence of Soviet diplomacy."

MOREOVER, the old balance-of-power world went with the war. Great Britain ceased to be the overseer of the Continent, jockeying the military might of Germany and France into peaceful stalemate. Today Germany is broken in two. France is still struggling industrially and politically. Only the threat of American intervention deters the Red army from overrunning Europe.

The United States has been pushed forward by its military and industrial prowess into the unfamiliar role of defender of the Continent. The British have been shunted, because of the industrial and economic impoverishment of two wars, into an assisting role. Neither nation is making the adjustment easily or quickly. Turmoil in foreign policy is the inevitable result.

The Economist sees in Acheson's recent speeches a unifying policy for the United States and Great Britain—a spear of light in a dark world, saying: "The fact of the Soviet drive to world domination must, in his view, be accepted. The Russians will not be deflected from their goal by pacts or treaties or paper agreements, all of which will be observed only so long as they serve Soviet interests. You do not argue with a flood, you build dams. The Secretary of State's fundamental aim is thus one of 'agreement through strength'—agreement with Russia brought about by the Soviet government's realization that it has nothing more to gain by force or pressure."

Considering Senator McCarthy's attacks on Atcheson and the State Department, how refreshing, how encouraging is the Economist's view. But, far-off fields always seem bright, bright green. The American Secretary of State probably seems so much better to the Economist than the British Foreign Minister. Maybe it would be well if, at times, we in America had the gift to see ourselves as others see us—not only as to weakness, but also as to strength, economic as well as political.

Demand to Put Money in Paper Bag Nets $60

Being a High's Ice Cream store, you'd think the clerks would understand. The big paper bag the man was carrying last night had written on it in red pencil: "Put all your money in the bag."

But Pearl Dobbins, 40, of 1749 Swann st. nw., the clerk at the store at 1625 17th st. nw., didn't quite get it. The main explained. "Put all your money in the bag or I'll blow your brains," he said. He held one hand in his pocket, menacingly.

Another clerk, Rebecca Delaney, 46, of 1104 21st pl. ne., understood, but wouldn't cooperate. She was trying to stuff the paper money behind the cash drawer. The man tried again. "Put all the paper money in the bag or I'll blow your brains out," he said.

That did it. About $60 worth. The clerks described the man as slender, 30 years old, wearing a grey topcoat and a brown hat.

Easter Sales Score Belated Climb in D. C.

By S. Oliver Goodman

Easter sales of Washington department stores scored a belated gain of 3 percent in the week ended April 1, but remained below expectations.

Last week should have been the peak period for Easter purchases, since it was the second week before the holiday, merchants pointed out.

The current week, ending today, may show an unfavorable comparison with the same 1949 period, although crowded stores on Thursday and Friday seemed to indicate a substantial amount of business.

For the four weeks ended April 1, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reports, Washington store sales lagged 2 percent behind the corresponding period last year.

Nationally, department store sales in the week ended April 1 were unchanged from the year-ago level despite the earlier Easter, the Federal Reserve Board noted.

Pa. 'Mercy' Slaying Held Manslaughter

Allentown, Pa., April 7 (AP).—A man the State claimed "stepped into the shoes of God" to kill his blind, cancer-stricken brother was found guilty of voluntary manslaughter today.

The jury of four women and eight men on this Good Friday convicted Harold A. Mohr, 36-year-old tannery worker, in the deer-rifle slaying of his brother, Walter, 55, at their home in nearby Coplay March 8. The jury recommended mercy.

It was the third conviction for a so-called "mercy killing' on record in the United States. Oddly enough, the other two also were at Allentown.

Mohr pleaded temporary insanity. Two psychiatrists testified his mind cracked under long duress from "horrors in his home." There were stomach-turning descriptions of conditions in the "stench-filled" Mohr home in the last year of Walter Mohr's life.

Harold testified his mind was blank from the time Walter asked him for a cup of coffee the night of the slaying until he awoke the next morning in prison. He and his brothers said Walter repeatedly asked to be "put out of his misery."

Judge James F. Henninger promised to take the jury's plea into consideration when he sentences Mohr. Sentencing was delayed pending a possible request for a new trial. The maximum penalty is 12 years in prison plus a fine of up to $6000.

Police Seek 3 Jailbreakers In Virginia Shooting, Holdup

Bristol, Va., April 7 (AP).—Three armed men overpowered and wounded a southwest Virginia policeman and then used his patrol car in the holdup of two motorists today on Route 19, near Abingdon.

The two incidents set off an intensive search in Virginia, West Virginia, Tennessee, Kentucky and North Carolina for three escaped Virginia convicts for questioning.

Late today the search for the armed trio shifted to the area of Rocky Mount, Va. Officers received a report that a green Pontiac sedan, carrying three men, was sighted traveling on Highway 220 in the direction of Rocky Mount from Roanoke.

Washington County police said a kidnap angle was involved in the shooting of night Policeman Roscoe Mutter, 31, of Damascus, Va. Mutter was shot in the ribs and left handcuffed to his assailants' automobile. The trio had taken him from Virginia into Tennessee.

The bandits overpowered the officer and took his police car when he halted their car in Damascus.

Shortly after midnight, a trio of armed men, riding in the stolen car, halted an automobile 1 mile west of Abingdon, and took approximately $200, luggage and the car from its two male occupants. The motorists then were locked in the trunk of the police car as the trio drove off in the newly commandeered 1949 Pontiac.

Sheriff C. N. Bordwine of Washington County identified the men sought as:

Amos Nuckols, 20, serving three years from Portsmouth for housebreaking; Tyler Hodges, jr., 18, serving five years from Rocky Mount for housebreaking, and George Able, 27, serving time on a 15-year sentence from Smyth County for housebreaking and jail escape.

Bordwine said the three escaped April 1 from a State prison camp in Halifax County.

The two motorists, Okey E. McCourt, 44, of Pineville, W. Va., and Okey Cougar, jr., 29, of Charleston, W. Va., told police the men who held them up "intimated to us they had done away with a Damascus policeman." McCourt and Cougar escaped from the locked car trunk

Court Dismisses Alienation Suit In Arlington

A $100,000 alienation of affections suit against George Francis Miles, 35, of 4761 N. 24th st., Arlington, has been dismissed by an Arlington Circuit Court jury.

The suit was filed last September by Arlington contractor Leonard K. Burton, 42, who charged that Miles, a pin-ball machine operator, had deprived him of the affections of his 32-year-old wife, Vivian.

The jury delivered its verdict for the defendant to Associate Circuit Judge William D. Medley after two hours deliberation, last Friday. Miles was represented by attorney Lytton Gibson.

Rep. Sutton's Father-in-Law Indicted in $63,000 Tax Case

Nashville, Tenn., April 7 (AP).—An indictment on file in Federal Court here charges W. B. Massey, father-in-law of Representative Pat Sutton (D., Tenn.), with income-tax evasion. Although the indictment was filed March 13 and a warrant placed in the hands of the United States marshal, it has not yet been served.

United States Marshal Larry M. Morphis declined to confirm or deny a published statement attributed to him that he had received instructions from the Department of Justice to defer service of the warrant.

United States District Attorney Ward Hudgins said he had received instructions from the department to "express our views to the marshal that service of the warrant should be deferred" until a hearing could be granted Massey.

Sutton represents the Seventh Congressional District, in which Lawrenceburg is located.

Although the tax and a negligence penalty have since been paid, the indictment charged Massey "wilfully and knowingly attempted to defeat and evade a large part of the income and victory tax due and owing by him to the United States" by filing "false and fraudulent tax returns."

Warrants have been served on four other Tennesseeans indicted by the same grand jury on charges of income tax evasion.

Mississippians to Welcome DAR

By Nicha Soure

When the Daughters of the American Revolution invade the Capital next week, the Mississippi State Society will be on hand to welcome them with a gala reception and dance.

On April 14, the Magnolia Staters in Washington will honor Mrs. Edward Cage Brewer, candidate for vice president general, DAR, at a reception, ballet floor show and dance at the Shoreham Hotel. The reception will be from 9 until 10 p. m. followed by dancing.

Washington's "Ballet Soiree," directed by Marion Venable, will be featured on the program in a "Salute to Mississippi."

In the receiving line at the reception will be President Holden Rhymes, Mrs. A. L. Jagoe, Mr. and Mrs. Brewer, Mrs. Harry Artz Alexander, Mississippi State regent; Mrs. W. S. Welch, State vice president general; Mrs. Herbert Forrest, first vice regent; Mrs. S. T. Pilkinton, second vice regent; Mrs. H. H. Moorehead, recording secretary, and Mrs. Louise M. Heaton, registrar.

The Oklahoma State Society will hold its final dance of the season tonight in the main ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel. The reception will be at 9:30 p. m., to be followed by dancing until 1 a. m.

The New York State Society will round out its current season at the Shoreham Hotel with a "Treasury Department Night Ball" on Saturday, April 15.

This last of a series of monthly dances featuring the Government departments will honor the officials and employes of the Treasury Department. Following a reception at 9:30 p. m., the Empire Staters will dance to the music of Dave McWilliams Orchestra from 10 p. m. to 1 a. m. Formal dress is optional and enlisted servicemen in uniform will be admitted free.

President Harold B. Barnett announces that the society will sponsor its sixth annual Maytime dance and cruise on May 5 aboard the S. S. Mount Vernon of the Wilson Line. The State Societies of Alabama, Connecticut, Florida, Idaho, Kansas, Maine, Maryland, Michigan, Mississippi, New Hampshire, New Jersey, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Dakota and Wisconsin are joining the New Yorkers in this joint affair, according to Mr. Barnett. Phone Miss Dorothy Gollinger at Kenmore 3-3004 for further information.

The April dance of the Pennsylvania State Society will be held in the West ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel Friday.

Dancing from 10 p. m. until 1 a. m. will be to the music of McWilliams orchestra. For further information, call Mrs. Ray Whitney at Glebe 2629 or Mrs. Algia A. Martin at Otis 7455.

Boston baked beans and New England square dancing will be the drawing cards for the Massachusetts Society's get-together on Tuesday.

The second bean supper of the society will be held in Pierce Hall, 16th and Harvard sts. at 7:15 p. m. But only the first 125 persons to make reservations will be able to attend the supper. Reservations may be made through William R. Neagle at Temple 6431.

The new feature of the Massachusetts party will be square dancing from 9 p. m. to midnight. Ralph Case will call the steps for some old-fashioned (or is it new-fangled?) square dancing.

And don't worry about what to wear, the society says. Gingham dresses and flat-heeled shoes for women and bright shirts and dungarees for their escorts will be the costumes of the day.

The Louisiana State Society showed its appreciation of its officers by reelecting the entire slate at a recent business meeting.

Serving another term as president of the society will be Felix M. Broussard. Other officers are Representative James H. Morrison, first vice president; Miss Betty Harter, second vice president; James H. Gill, secretary; Paul K. Jones, treasurer; William Hanley, sergeant at arms, and Henri L. Gueydan, historian.

Thursday, April 13, will be a busy day for the Kentucky State Society.

When the members meet in the ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel, the organization will elect officers, hold its final business session and at 10 p. m. the Blue Grass Staters will celebrate their annual pre-Derby festival.

South Trimble, jr., president of the Kentucky Society, announced that Mrs. William Burkhalter, chairman of the nominating committee, will report at 9:45 p. m. All Kentuckians holding annual memberships will be permitted to vote for a president, three vice presidents, a secretary and a treasurer.

It will be "Aviation Night" on the Nebraska State Society calendar on April 15 at the National Airport Terrace.

The party will begin at 9:30 p. m. with dancing to the music of Jack Morton and his orchestra. This get-together will be followed by the closing event of the society, the traditional Potomac River boat ride on May 19, according to the president, Clifford Sandahl.

The Wyoming State Society will honor its home state Congressional delegation at a reception and cocktail party on Thursday, April 13. The reception will be from 6 to 8 p. m. in the Dupont Plaza Hotel on Dupont Circle.

Receiving with the vice presidents of the society, Miss Mary Mahan and Peter Q. Nyce, will be Senator and Mrs. Joseph C. O'Mahoney, Senator and Mrs. Lester C. Hunt, Representative and Mrs. Frank A. Barrett and the historian of the society, Miss Irene F. Long.

And I'm sure it isn't me!

If you'd wrap a little adhesive tape around the center of the hanging wire, Petunia, you'd have no trouble. Try it!

Cocktails Aren't Food, But They Fatten You Up Anyway

By Ida Jean Kain

TO keep convivial folk from calling on the telephone at odd hours, even long distance, inquiring the number of calories in a very dry martini, or to settle an argument as to whether or not alcohol is fattening . . . here's the score again.

Alcoholic beverages do not contain protein, carbohydrate or fat, and while alcohol delivers calories they are not stored and can make no fat. Still, in a roundabout way, the stuff is fattening, and such paradoxical behavior on the part of alcohol has been the basis of heated arguments since the dawn of fermentation.

As everybody knows, food and alcohol behave differently. Food is digested; alcohol is oxidized. Because alcohol cannot be stored, the energy it supplies is burned first . . . that is, before the food calories. So while alcohol calories are being used for energy, food calories—not being needed—are stored as fat.

Alcohol Never a Food Substitute

THE person who drinks and does not eat won't be troubled with excess weight. No, but in that case other and more serious troubles may result, such as neuritis, neurosis and nervous and deficiency disorders too dreadful to dwell on. The facts here are that alcohol is no substitute for food, for it contains none of the essential repair materials. Since it cannot be stored, the thin drinker who doesn't eat gets thinner and more nervous.

The person who drinks and eats heartily is in a fair way to piling on pounds, on a couple of scores. It's common knowledge that cocktails whet the appetite, which often leads to tasty tidbits of one kind and another, and on to dinner. Alcohol causes a greater appetite for food because of its dulling effect on the higher nerve centers. Inhibitions are lifted, including calorie caution.

Cocktail Taboo On Strict Diet

HERE's the count. The calorie content of whiskies is 85 per ounce of bourbon, rye and Irish; 75 per ounce of Scotch and gin. Vermouth counts 50 calories for one ounce of Italian, and 32 calories for one ounce of French. The number of calories in a cocktail depends on the ingredients.

On a very strict reducing diet limited to 1000 calories, alcoholic beverages are taboo, for they cannot take the place of any protective food; and the essentials cannot be included for less than 1000 calories. On a more liberal diet, a cocktail can take the place of dessert, and the dieter will come out even.

Mrs. Perle Mesta Is Earnest in Diplomatic Role

By Marie McNair

SMILING and poised Mrs. Perle Mesta, United States Minister to Luxembourg, faced a corps of newsmen and women at a minute press conference at the State Department.

She parried all questions on politics both here and abroad, explaining she was here in accordance with Foreign Service custom of recalling envoys every six months for conferences. She's been in Luxembourg almost nine months, she said, loves the little country and wants to return.

Wearing a gray tweed suit with matching cape and a gray felt beret, Washington's No. 1 party-giver until she became minister, said she has given no thought to resuming that role.

"I'm not thinking of parties, I'm thinking now of the things we have to do in the world," she explained.

Mum on Leopold

LUXEMBOURGERS don't discuss the Belgian King's prospective return to the throne, Mme. Minister declared. They consider it Belgium's problem.

In answer to a question what the tiny Duchy thinks of Senator McCarthy's attack on Secretary of State Acheson, she replied that she doubts if the people had read much about it.

What the Marshall Plan means to Luxembourg was answered with the statement that economically the country is in marvelous shape, has had little of the funds simply because it doesn't need it.

"Ice Cream Omelette"

ON THE lighter side, Mrs. Mesta was asked to describe a "flaming ice cream omelette" which she is said to have served at one of her parties. A Luxembourg specialty, she said, it is similar to a baked Alaska and is served there smothered in burning rum.

During her month's stay in Washington, Mrs. Mesta will work every day and all day at her desk in the State Department. She hopes to visit her home at Newport for "at least 12 hours," but beyond that has no further plans for travel in this country. And, she said, she won't be giving one of her famous parties while here.

MME. Minister—Mrs. Perle Mesta, U. S. Envoy to Luxembourg, at her State Department desk which she'll use during her month's stay in Washington. With her is Robert M. Winfree, head of the Luxembourg desk of the Department of State.

When she left Washington last autumn Perle Mesta took with her a newspaper woman, Miss Dorothy Williams, as her secretary. Miss Williams, she said, received an offer from ECA in Paris at a higher salary and she couldn't in all fairness ask her to stay.

Mrs. "Veep" Gives Tea

"IT'S NOT a debut," said Mrs. Barkley, the Vice President's bride, of the small tea which she gave yesterday for her daughter, Anne Hadley.

Miss Hadley's holiday from Sophie Newcomb College in New Orleans, is brief at Easter time because the students get time off for Mardi Gras. She'll leave Monday to return to her studies. Yesterday seemed the best time to meet some of her mother's new friends. It was a good looking threesome who greeted the 60 or 70 ladies as they arrived. Young Jane, a student at Holton Arms was there, too.

Mrs. Barkley wore a black chiffon cocktail frock with bands of lace forming the bodice and sleeves and had pinned pink camellias at the neckline. Anne's frock was black crepe with long sleeves and draped skirt with rhinestone button accents. Jane wore navy blue taffeta with a crisp white ruffle banding the bodice. She had a gardenia on her shoulder and Anne wore an orchid.

Tonight, Vice President Barkley's son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas MacArthur 2d, will give a dinner for Anne and a group of young people at the Chevy Chase Club. Among them will be Mrs. MacArthur's niece, Miss Beatrice MacArthur, daughter of Mrs. Littlefield MacArthur and Bowman MacArthur.

News Notes

Representative and Mrs. Roy Woodruff have taken off for White Sulphur Springs, W. Va. to spend the Easter holidays.

Representative and Mrs. Thruston Morton have left for their home in Glenview, Ky., for the congressional recess. Mrs. Morton will make only short visits back to Washington and when Mr. Morton returns he'll share an apartment at the Congressional Hotel with Representative Donald Jackson.

Truman Works On Speeches For Campaign

Key West, Fla., April 7 (AP).—President Truman's staffers reported today he is in fighting trim for coast-to-coast campaigning in the 1950 congressional elections.

Deeply tanned and apparently relaxed, the Chief Executive continued work on the rough outlines of speeches he will make on a railroad swing into the Northwest in May.

Several pounds heavier than the 167 at which he tipped the scales upon entering the White House five years ago next Wednesday, he is still whittling at the excess weight acquired during his occupany of the Nation's highest office.

Mr. Truman flies back to Washington Monday for conferences with Cabinet, congressional, national committee and other advisers.

Some of them are already at work on strategy for his trip to dedicate the Grand Coulee Dam in Washington State around May 11. The President will return by way of Chicago, where he is to make a fighting political speech at a Democratic jamboree in the stadium May 15.

The President is flying back to Florida April 21, stopping off at Fort Benning, Ga., to witness military demonstrations there before moving to Elgin Field to view Air Force demonstrations the next day.

Mrs. Truman went home today. She drove over to Miami to take a train for Washington. Margaret is flying back to Washington with her dad.

They will use an Air Force Constellation plane, the so-called "Dew Drop." The President made his own plane, the "Independence," available to President Gonzales of Chile, who is stopping over at the "Winter White House" here Tuesday night en route to Washington for a state visit.

Chilly weather of the last couple of days has interfered with the President's vacation plans. He couldn't swim yesterday or this morning. The temperature dropped into the 50s last night.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

500 ACRES, located in the zone of 7 new gateways to Washington. South Capitol st. gateway is open for traffic with the capacity of 50,000 automobiles a day. That brings this 500 acres within 12 minutes of the White House. The other gateways coming in from Alexandria over the Potomac to this neighborhood. Another gateway, East Capitol St. Bridge will be built real soon. Another gateway, the Baltimore Blvd. is also coming into this neighborhood. The Penna. Ave. Bridge and the 11th St. Bridge are already in operation in this neighborhood. This makes the greatest gateway into Washington. If you want to make value comparison with the Virginia bridges across the Potomac, the 14th St. Bridge South where the Hot Shoppe is located in Virginia is worth a million an acre. The Key Bridge across the Potomac in Georgetown is worth a million an acre in the shopping zone. The Memorial Bridge is also worth a million an acre in the shopping zone. Doesn't that convince you that property where they have 7 gateways should be worth a million an acre before many years. If you want to make money in acreage—you got to get active. See this property, stop your car at the Maryland line and South Capitol st. If you will look ahead 4 squares you will see this 500 acres. Look to the right and look to the left—you will see a hundred million houses and apartments under construction. If you are a subdivider, you can make millions. I am in my 83d year and this subdividing is a young man's job. I am settling my own estate, otherwise I would not sell. Reach me at my home. WO. 0933. Fulton R. Gordon, owner. Brokers' attention.

Machinists Back Murray Unity Plea

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

CIO President Phillip Murray's plea for immediate functional unity for the big labor organizations, and for an eventual merger, received the sympathetic response of the International Association of Machinists yesterday.

Al J. Hayes, president of the 600,000-member independent IAM, said his organization stands ready to discuss Murray's proposal for setting up a high-level joint committee for a common program on the legislative, economic and political fronts.

"Our union has long felt that disunity in the labor movement is a tragic negation of the whole principle of collective action," Hayes replied to Murray.

"We have publicly expressed the opinion, on many occasions, within the past few years that a much more realistic and sincere type of cooperation among the trade unions was desirable and necessary if we are to protect our membership from the reactionary antiunion forces which are attempting to weaken the trade unions and ultimately to destroy them."

On Thursday John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers, which has some million members, wrote Murray stating its desire to participate in the unified program. Earlier AFL President William Green disclosed he was favorably inclined and would talk it over with Murray before taking up the invitation with the AFL executive council.

Only sour note, and that unofficial, appeared to be coming from the big railroad brotherhoods, also invited to join the unity program. Labor, a weekly publication of the brotherhoods, noted in one of its news columns, that some labor leaders were critical of the manner in which Murray announced the invitations.

"If Murray really meant this, he should have met with us privately and explored the group," one labor leader was quoted as saying.

Hotels Slated For Census On Tuesday

Census workers will count noses of transients in about 55 of the city's larger hotels Tuesday night in the next special job of the 1950 enumeration.

Enumerators will be in hostelries of 50 or more rooms from 5 p. m. to midnight.

They will distribute individual census report blanks through officials to the guests, who will be asked to fill them out on their own and return them to the census men at the registration desk the same night.

The reports will be sent to the transients' home districts to be checked against reports made by house-to-house enumerators so there will be no duplication.

Hotels of less than 50 rooms will be canvassed in the regular block-by-block enumeration, officials explained.

Street Parade Opens Variety Club's Rodeo

The show opens at 2:30 p. m. at the Armory and runs through next Saturday. Evening performances will be at 8:30. Proceeds go to aid needy children of all races and creeds.

A parade heralding the show will start at 10 a. m. today in the downtown district bounded by 9th and 14th sts. and G st. and Pennsylvania ave.

The Lone Ranger will not take part in the parade but it will include other featured performers.

Tickets are 50 cents for children, and $1, $1.50 and $2.40 for adults. They may be bought at the Variety trailer at 14th F sts. nw., Kitt's Music Store, the Fairway Sports Store, Willard ticket bureau and the Armory.

Pope Pius XII—Priest and Statesman

Pope Stated Stand Against Russia Early

Kees Van Hoek, a native of The Hague and now an Irish citizen, has been a correspondent in London, Geneva and the United States. His first biography of Pius XII appeared in 1939. After much research and a private audience with the Pope last fall, Van Hoek has written in "Pope Pius XII, Priest and Statesman," a full and vivid description of the man and his career, from a delicate boy in Rome to supreme ruler of the Roman Catholic world. The biography is presented by The Washington Post during the present Holy Year, in 24 daily installments.

Chapter XXI—The Great Issue

MANKIND today is divided into two worlds, two supernatural forces are facing each other in a battle for supremacy over the souls of men, the church and communism. In that battle Pius XII is incontestably the champion of what even those who are not of his faith accept as essential—all that Christian civilization, or call it democracy, stands for. He saw the clash coming long before Russia's then Western Allies realized the ghastly mistake which they were making.

The Pope mounted the barricades with his address to the College of Cardinals, delivered on June 1, 1946—the eve of the French and Italian elections: "Tomorrow the citizens of two great nations go in compact array to the polling booths. What is really at issue? It is to be decided whether these two sister nations of Latin culture and deep devotion to Christian civilization, will continue to rest on the firm rock of Christianity, on the acknowledgment of a personal God, on belief in the spiritual dignity and the eternal destiny of man, or if, instead, they will choose to entrust their future to the unfeeling omnipotence of a materialistic state, without any ideal beyond this world, without religion and without God."

Stalin had once asked Roosevelt how many divisions the Pope had. The sneer of such a typical militarist, who only counts might by armies, soon got its unexpected answer. When the Kremlin realized how strong were the spiritual forces which the Pope could mobilize, it ordered concentrated attacks on the person and the politics of the head of the church, a flood of hate and lies and distortion. It also ordered bodily attacks on those of the Pope's most trusted and highest placed dignitaries within the physical power of the masters of Moscow and of its creatures ruling in Soviet satellite states.

Stepinac Arrested

ARCHBISHOP Stepinac of Zagreb, the primate of entirely Catholic Croatia, was arrested on trumped-up charges of the Tito regime and is still in prison. Worse was the treatment which the Soviet bosses of Budapest meted out to the Hungarian primate, Cardinal Mindszenty, whom they reduced to a physical wreck, then gave a life sentence and have now transported to the Soviet Union. Since the autumn of last year Archbishop Beran of Prague, who was once in a Nazi concentration camp for his patriotism as a Czech, has been kept a virtual prisoner in his palace, prevented from any contact with his flock or with the outside world. In many lands predominantly Catholic — Hungary, Croatia, Slovenia, Czechoslovakia (not to forget Ruthenia which was in 1945 entirely incorporated into the Soviet Union)—all religion is treated as the opium of the people, bishops and priests have been arrested, the church is prevented in every possible way from fulfilling its mission, a coming generation is schooled in Marxist atheism without the acceptance of which there is no future for them in their own land.

Politics do not interest the Vatican as politics. Only when they touch the altar, when they violate the most precious heritage of men, does the Vatican concern itself with them. Pius XII formulated it in the letter with which he acknowledged a message of President Truman, a message in which the head of the United States ranged himself on the side of moral power. Wrote Pius XII to President Truman:

"Since her foundation, almost 2000 years ago, the church has ever been the protector of the individual against despotism, of the worker against oppression. Her divine mission has often brought her into conflict with the powers of evil, but the church knows no fear, she cannot compromise with the declared foes of God."

"We are," so the Pope explained in his Christmas address of 1947, "not for or against a bloc of states, but we are for Christ and against the enemies of Christendom."

Made Issue Clear

THE great hour sounded with the Italian general elections of April, 1948. The Pope made the issue clear to all, quoting the words of Christ, that whoever is not for Him is against Him. "In your conscience there can be no room for blind credulity any more, you know where the foe stands!" On April 18, the Democrazia Christiana, the Catholic Democratic Party of Prime Minister Alcide de Gasperi (who in the lean years of Fascist persecution had managed to keep body and soul together by a post in the Vatican library) won an absolute majority. Thus April 18, 1948, marks decisively the turning of the Communist tide. Ever since, in all countries where elections are still free, Communism has lost heavily. Even in liberal Norway, the Communist Party was literally decimated in the election of October, 1949.

One of the strongest moves of the Pope has been his direction, last year, that no member of the Communist Party can receive the sacraments of the church. As a result, the Communist Party has lost noticeably in numbers, especially in Italy but markedly also in France, Germany and the Low Countries. Up until then many people who considered themselves at least nominally Catholics had yet voted for the Communists for material reasons. I remember, some years before at Honfleur, on the French Atlantic coast, that the entire town partook with fervor in the ceremonial blessing of the fishing fleet—yet that town had a majority of Communists on its Council! Such anomalies, and the example could be multiplied by thousands, is now no longer possible. In the great issues of today the pontiff has made it repeatedly clear that Catholics can cooperate with all who share the social implications of Christ's teachings.

Postwar politics in Europe have witnessed a party political development which gives the Pope's leadership a new emphasis. Great Catholic democratic parties now dominate the governments of Italy, France, Western Germany, Belgium and Holland. Men like Premier de Gasperi in Rome, Premier Bidault in Paris, Premier Eyskens in Brussels, Chancellor Adenauer in Bonn, are not merely practicing Catholics, but devoted sons of the church, to whom Pius XII is verily the vicar of Christ on earth, his teachings divinely inspired.

Floorwalker

He is that special gentleman . . . Who strides across the floor . . . To make you feel more welcome when . . . You come into the store . . . Who answers all your questions and . . . Directs you on your way . . . And who approves the checks you write . . . When it is time to pay . . . He also helps the personnel . . . With problems that arise . . . And sees that every shelf is stocked . . . With quality and size . . . And all the while he has to be . . . A good detective, too . . . And watch for sticky fingers and . . . The tricks they try to do . . . In stylish clothes and gentle gait . . . His job may look like fun . . . But many are his duties and . . . The tasks that must be done.

Count the letters in your first name. Subtract four if the number is six or more. Add three if the number is less than six. Then you have the key number. Check each key number left to right. The letters under the checks form a message.

Queen Bee Gets Jack in Sport of Kings

"Everything happens to me," moaned a friend of mine when I ran into him on the street last night.

"What's the matter?" I sympathized.

"Can you imagine," he sighed, "I went out to Laurel for the last day of the meeting today, and hit the daily double and then five more winners. I had seven out of eight winners."

"Why, what's the matter with that?" I asked.

"I can't go home," he sobbed. "The old lady knows where I've been, and if I show up with a pocket full of money she'll take it away from me."

Personally, I have never been faced with this problem. But I'm perfectly willing to wrestle with it any time Dame Fortune decrees.

MONOTONOUS, ISN'T IT?

Latest culprit to tie up 14th st. traffic by parking alongside the loading platform near the District Building, instead of in the properly designated loading zone: A truck assigned to the Government Printing Office.

NO. 473

Our sports editor, Luther "Bus" Ham, was driving his missus home to Virginia the other midnight when the family auto coughed to a stop on one of the desolate roads near the Pentagon.

Mrs. Ham wasn't feeling too well, and wasn't up to hiking back to civilization. And Bus wasn't going to leave her alone out there at that hour.

So he wiggled his thumb at passing motorists, waved his arms, and made frantic gestures. But the steady stream of headlights went past him pffft pffft pffft, without even slowing up.

"I think I counted 472 of them," Bus recalls. "And I can't blame them much."

But at 473, his luck changed. From the darkness enveloping a nearby cloverleaf approach came the query: "Having trouble, neighbor?"

Bus allowed as how he was having more trouble than somewhat, so the stranger emerged from the darkness and explained that he'd driven by once, but circled back over the cloverleaf to see if he could be of help.

That was all Bus needed to hear. The Hams piled into the Good Samaritan's car and went off in search of professional help.

"He drove us all over the county looking for an open garage," says Bus, "and then searched some more until he found us a public phone so that we could call the 3-A's. He turned out to be CPO Arlington Zetty of 4726 S. 29th st., in Fairlington, Va. He plays the piccolo in the Navy Band."

I checked with Lieut. Comdr. Charles Brendler, leader of the Navy Band. "Pretty nice guy, this Zetty?" I asked.

"Not only admired by every man in the outfit," replied Commander Brendler, "but an excellent musician. One of the best in the country." Then, as an afterthought, he added soberly:

"I'm glad your sports editor didn't turn out to be a holdup man waiting to blackjack somebody. Top-notch piccolo players are mighty scarce."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Pretty little 5-week-old pup, mostly fox terrier, part spitz." (Georgia 7181 after 10 a. m.)

"Two healthy, housebroken, short-haired female cats, not accustomed to children." (Otis 8928.)

"Housebroken, 1 - year - old watchdog, mixture of Airedale and wire-haired terrier; likes children." (Shepherd 0352.)

THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Mrs. Webb Taylor of 4713 Wells pkwy., Riverdale, Md., wonders who it was that first said:

"Those who have no children raise them well."

ADD SIMILES

LOOK-ALIKES, REVISITED

A few days ago I ran an item about the striking resemblance between Senator George D. Aiken and Post Reporter John Ball.

The point of the story was that some junketing schoolchildren had mistaken Ball for the Senator.

The other night Reporter Ball was at a party to which a great many men from the Hill had been invited.

As our man stood chatting with Senator Clinton P. Anderson, a stranger walked up, slapped Ball on the back, and chuckled:

"Senator, I got a big kick out of that story about the schoolchildren who mistook you for a Post reporter. That was really funny."

"It certainly was," mused Ball in retrospect. "I had an awful time convincing him I wasn't his friend the Senator."

EXPERIENCE SHOWS MR. TUCKER THAT POST WANT ADS ARE BEST

EXPERIENCE has shown Mr. Boyd Tucker of 1834 16th St. nw. that he gets the best results with Post want ads. Mr. Tucker has been using want ads for many years to find tenants for the rooms he rents and time after time, he has seen Post want ads produce results more quickly.

Just the other day he tried an ad in another Washington newspaper. The ad appeared for a week, but he had no luck in finding a tenant. Then he placed the ad in still another Washington newspaper—still no results. Finally, he put the ad in The Washington Post and in less than two days found the tenant he was seeking. "I always get results within two days when I use Post want ads," says Mr. Tucker.

Mr. Tucker's success is typical of the record of many Post want ad users. Use a Post want ad yourself when you're looking for a tenant for your room or apartment and you'll see how economical and effective Post want ads are. It's easy to place a Post want ad. Just call NAtional 4200 and ask for Classified.

Move to Halt Crime Probe Seen

By Drew Pearson

There's more than meets the eye behind the mysterious maneuvering to block the Kefauver resolution for an investigation of organized crime and gambling in the U. S. A. It is now April. The Kefauver investigation was first proposed in January. Yet it hasn't even passed the Senate.

Officially, the delay is part of SEN. KEFAUVER the usual Senate routine — the question of which committee shall investigate what, and so forth.

But behind the question of which Senator shall do the crime-gambling investigation, some powerful forces are at work which don't want any investigation at all. Senator Kefauver, himself, has had all sorts of personal pressure brought by friends he never dreamed were close to the gamblers asking him to sidetrack his probe. Kefauver is standing pat, though one or two of his colleagues may not be so scrupulous.

Crime-Ridden California

Meanwhile, more amazing revelations have come to light in the second most populous State in the Union, California, where law enforcement is in the hands of Attorney General Fred Howser, notorious for his friendship with the gamblers.

It has now been revealed by the California Crime Commission that one of Howser's former aides, George Rochester, received around $400 from the Al Capone of California, Jack Dragna, at the very time Dragna's racing news service was under attack.

Rochester, friend and former aide of Attorney General Howser, was in charge of a committee investigating loan companies which whitewashed the Guaranty Finance Co. Despite this, it was later indicted by a Los Angeles County grand jury, independent of Howser, as being a collection agency for gamblers.

According to Warren Olney, counsel of the California Crime Commission, Howser's office exerted "inexplicable intervention" on behalf of the Guaranty Finance Corp. at the very same time George Rochester, Howser's former aide, was receiving payments from California gambling czar, Jack Dragna.

These are some of the amazing developments which not only would be scrutinized but might induce Federal legislation—if Senator Kefauver's kicked-around resolution ever passes the Senate.

Natural Gas in Senate

"What's the pending business in the Senate?" requested the voice.

"Gas," barked press attendant Del Malkie.

NAM Letter-Writing

Last month, this column told how the NAM staged a meeting in New York at which Lemuel Boulware, vice president of General Electric, outlined plans to win labor votes in the next election through slips in pay envelopes and other employe promotion.

Now the NAM has prepared several hundred letters, sent to editors, blasting this column. Though the letters are identical, they are signed by different names in each city, thus giving them the appearance of a spontaneous letter-writing campaign.

In Los Angeles, for instance, the letter was signed by Lane D. Webber; in Reno, Nev., by Joseph A. Moore; in Toledo, Ohio, by J. J. Bieber; in Newark, N. J., by M. B. Doyle; and in Beaver Falls, Pa., by L. W. Ingram. Yet all the letters were exactly the same.

Only factual error the letters could find in the column was that the NAM's campaign was not "quiet," but public.

Note to NAM Officials — Next time send me the letter direct. I'll be glad to make the correction and save the trouble of drumming up local signatures.

Merry-Go-Round

CIO leaders have been telling Walter Reuther that his tactics of cracking down on all the auto companies will soon leave the U. S. A. with only one big company—General Motors. Ford, Chrysler and the smaller companies can't stand the continued round of union demands, and if they should close, the union would be out of luck . . . Smart GOP Senator Hugh Butler of Nebraska is working with Alaskan business interests to delay hearings on Alaskan statehood. He thinks he can outmaneuver easy-going, gracious Chairman Joe O'Mahoney of Wyoming . . . Senator Kerr's proposed new judge for Oklahoma, Bob Wallace, is being reexamined by the Justice Department. Officials seemed surprised that Wallace was 65 years old and served 25 years as a Socony-Vacuum attorney . . . Kerr not only wants the Kerr bill on the law books, but also wants his hand-picked judge to administer the law . . . Ed Rivers, son of Georgia's pro-Klan former Governor, is now operating a pro-Negro radio station in Decatur, Ga. Young Rivers has had such response to having Negroes give their own programs that he has started a similar station in Savannah—despite local radio opposition . . . Utah's Senator Elbert Thomas, world scholar and former missionary, suggests a simple antidote for the harassing troubles of the Atomic Age—faith in God. Thomas has written a new book, "This Nation Under God," showing how religious faith has guided the destiny of this Nation and kept it on a sound basis.
